Fuel for the Future in Canada

A few years ago an attempt to utilize the peat bogs of Prince Edward county for fuel proved a disappointment and the project was abandoned. If the claims of an inventive genius from Quebec are reliable, the peat bogs of this county may yet develop an important factor in the industrial energy of the district. The Quebec man has introduced a new idea into the treatment of the turf. Instead of trying to dry it and press it to burn like coal, the theory is, that peat being full of cells charged with different gases, by putting it through some process the gas can be collected. It is claimed that these gases are very inflammable, and in proof of this contention, the natural phenomenon of lights floating over bogs, commonly called will-o'-the-wisp, are supposed to arise from these gases. By a patented process these gases are being collected and used the same as natural gas or coal gas. Mr. Harvey of Maitland, who has had the process patented, claims to have proved the success of the plan, and has installed tanks and apparatus and is now burning the gas in a gas stove and has several lights burning every night. The light is said to be soft and white and very much superior to coal gas. It is proposed to run an engine with the gas and generate electric energy for light and power. Very little machinery is required for the new process and a small quantity of gas is said to create a large amount of power. It is claimed for this invention that very cheap power can be generated all over Canada. In these days of power development the experiments at Maitland will be followed with interest.—Pictou Times.

The Earliest Coal Mines

More than 150 years ago, or in 1745, and before the Pennsylvania coal fields or indeed any American coal field had been opened, the men of Boston, organized for the protection of their coal and fish supplies, went down to Louisbourg and drove the French from that pioneer fortress. Then the English by treaty gave it back to the French and had to go again in 1775 and batter down the French fortifications and make their magazines subterranean passages and moats into sheep pasture. Thus they remained for one hundred years, until another man from Boston, again seeking coal for New England came up to Louisbourg, rejuvenated the town, built docks and coal pockets, consolidated the scattered coal interests of Sydney, and began shipping coal by the 100,000 tons to Boston; then he opened up the iron ore deposits at Beauséjour and started the manufacture of steel.

To-day the name of Henry M. Whitney is the only name to conjure with in Cape Breton. He did more for that country in a few years than had been done in the previous hundred and fifty. To-day the ore and coal deposits of the Dominion Coal Company and the Dominion Coal Company are measured in the ground by the thousand millions—3,000,000,000 tons of coal and 2,000,000,000 tons of iron ore; the great docks, wharves and coal pockets are just as Mr. Whitney planned them.

The people of Sydney take pride in these works and in the town and admit that all the incentive came from Mr. Whitney. They even declare that Sidney might to-day be without a first-class hotel, except that Mr. Whitney backed the hotel enterprise which is now a credit to the town.

It is the same Mr. Whitney that developed the asbestos interests of Canada; opened up the biggest asbestos mine in the world; put in the biggest machinery and equipment, and took out the largest and best and most profitable product, and the asbestos development of Canada to-day is where Mr. Whitney left it.

A London, (Eng.) despatch says: The Salvation Army received 100,000 applications for emigration to Canada this year. Of this number 10,000 were sent. The fifty-first conducted party left on Saturday.

Some authorities hold that fowl should be starved 24 hours before killing. This view is opposed by a writer in the American Agriculturist, who says fowl should be fed up to the evening of the day before slaughtering. It is said that the quality of the flesh is spoiled by the fretting which results from a longer period of starvation.

There is a general consensus of feeling that fowl should be confined for a week or two before killing, as the prevention of undue exercise, and liberal feeding, tends to putting on of a large amount of tender flesh.

The Cobalt Silver Region

The Cobalt "Nugget" has published a "Mining Industry Edition," which is of special interest from the industrial standpoint, and which puts Cobalt in a far different aspect than the usual stock market view of the mining industry.

A Comparative table on the first page shows that Cobalt has produced 29,942,999 tons of ore to the end of 1909, valued at $82,840,906, and has paid dividends amounting to over $20,000,000.

The record for 1910, so far, several hundred thousand dollars in advance of 1909 in both production and dividend.

The edition shows that in addition to the usual mining plants there are 18 concentrators in the camp, which cost over one and a half millions, and in which one thousand tons of ore are treated every day, giving a net profit of over $10,000 a day on the low grade ore alone.

There are 10,000 men engaged in the industry and Cobalt uses several million dollars worth of supplies annually.

Canada's Trade Increasing

Canada's trade is increasing at the rate of over one hundred million dollars a year, or nearly twenty per cent in advance of last year's high record. The figures of the Dominion trade for the first five months of the current fiscal year, show a total trade of $295,817,781, an increase of $48,029,448, over the corresponding period of last year. For the month of August the trade totalled $68,187,521, an increase of $7,318,490.

Imports for the five months totalled, $184,692,965, a comparative increase of $41,844,972. August imports totalled, $38,691,690, an increase of $8,086,835 over August of last year.

Exports of domestic products for the five months totalled $108,414,496, an increase of $6,478,571. Domestic exports for the last month totalled $22,461,918, a falling off of a little over a million as compared with last year.

An increase of $1,030,481 in Custom receipts for the month just ending means another increase of about eight millions in imports for the month as compared with last September.

A contest between the young ladies' and young men's Bible classes to see which could secure the largest attendance for three months, ended last Sunday. The young men won. The losers are to furnish a supper and entertainment for both classes, which will be given on Friday evening, Oct. 7th. The wicked inn at our elbow suggests that the entertainment will be most cheerfully given in view of the fact that the disparity of numbers gives the young ladies a 20.17 per cent better chance in the matrimonial market over the young men.

Wentworth-Woodhouse, where Lord and Lady Fitzwilliam will entertain a large party of friends for Doncaster races, is the largest country house in England. It has never yet been fully occupied, though on more than one occasion as many as sixty guests with their servants have been received under its hospitable roof, says M. A. P. The dining hall, which is beautifully paneled in old oak, is an immense room capable of accommodating 200 people at dinner; it is only used when Lord and Lady Fitzwilliam entertain a very large party of guests.

THE SECRET OF HER POWER;

It is a o'clock, there is a faint, suggestive light which means the dawn, young birds are twittering, there is a delicious scent of green leaves, of full-blown roses, of dewy mosses; the air is damp and warm; he can hear the feet of blackbirds scraping and turning over the mold and the grass; it is dark, yet he can distinguish the masses of the great woods beyond the gardens; the outline of the trees near his casement, the shape of the clouds as they move slowly southward. He wonders in what part of the old house, whose fantastic roofs and turrets, and gables and ivy-colored buttresses are hidden in the dusk of the summer night, they have given the Princess Sabaroff her chamber. He remains some time at the open window, and goes to his bed as the dawn grows rosy.

"Lord Blanford is in a very bad temper," says Mr. Wootton, when the smoking-room door has closed on the object of his detestation; when he paces, and adds significantly: "The Blanford, you know, were always a little—just a little—clever family, very clever, but we all know to what great wits are sadly often allied. And this man has never done anything with his talent and opportunities; never doing anything at all!"

"He has written first-rate books!" says Usk, angrily, always ready to defend a friend in absence. "Oh, books!" says Mr. Wootton, with bland but unutterable disdain. Mr. Wootton is a critic of books and therefore naturally despises them.

"What would you have him do?" growls Usk, pugnaciously. Mr. Wootton stretches his legs out and gazes with abstracted air at the ceiling. "Public life," he murmurs. "Public life is the only possible career of an Englishman of position. But it demands sacrifices, it demands sacrifices."

"You mean that one has to marry?" says the young duke of Queenstown, timidly.

Mr. Wootton smiles on him loftily. "Marry, yes, undoubtedly, and avoid scandals afterward; avoid, beyond all, those connections which lend such a charm to existence, but are apt to get into the newspapers!"

There is a general laugh. Mr. Wootton has not intended to make them laugh, and he resumes with stateliness, as though they had not interrupted him: "The country expects those sacrifices; no man succeeds in public life in England who does not make them."

"Melbourne, Palmerston, Sydney, Herbert!" murmurs one rebellious hearer.

Mr. Wootton waves him aside as he would an importunate fly: "Not to touch on living persons, I would select Lord Althrop as the model of the public leader most suited to this country." It would not suit Lord Althrop to lead the blameless life of Lord Althrop. It would not suit him even to pretend to lead it. I don't if he could even look the part if he tried. The English are a peculiar people; they always mix public and private life together. Lord Beaconsfield remarked to me once—

And Mr. Wootton tells a story of Disraeli, a very good story, only he has taken it out of the journals of the President des Brosses and fathered it on Disraeli. But M. de Brosses is an author seldom read now, and nobody knows; if they did, nobody would care.

Mr. Wootton here knocks a little ash off his cigar and smiles like a man who has said something neatly.

"It is the first time I ever heard you compliment genius," murmurs Lawrence Hamilton.

"In Italy," pursues Mr. Wootton, "not very long ago a minister was accused of buying a piano out of the public funds for his mistress. Neither the piano nor the mistress hurt the gentleman in public estimation in that sort of accommodating climate. But that piano, though he might have paid for it with his own money, would have ruined an English politician. Though it had been the very smallest cottage piano conceivable, it would have buried him forever under it if it had got talked about; he would never have explained it away, or made it even contingently endurable to the nation. You may, if you are a public man in England, commit every conceivable blunder, add millions to the national debt, eat your own words every evening in debate, and plunge the country into an abyss of unmeasurable revolution, and they will still have confidence in you if you read the lessons in church and walk home with your wife, but if it is ever rumored that you admire your neighbor's wife, down you go forever. And yet," continues Mr. Wootton positively, "people do admire their neighbor's wife in England, and it seems a venial offence when one compares it with the desertion of Gordon, or the encouragement of a hydra-headed greed for the rich man's goods."

With which Mr. Wootton yawns, rises, and also declares his intention to go to bed.

The young duke follows him and walks by his side down the corridor. He is not at all like Disraeli's young duke; he is awkward, shy, and dull; he is neither amiable nor distinguished, but he has a painstaking wish in him to do well by his country, which is almost noble in a person who has been toadied, indulged, and tempted in all ways and on all sides ever since his cradle days. It is the disinterested patriotism which has been so largely the excellence and honor of the English nobility, and which is only possible in men of position so high that they are raised by it from birth above all vulgar covetousness or pecuniary needs.

"Do you really think?" says the duke, timidly, for he is very afraid of Henry Wootton. "Do you really think that to have any influence on English public life it is necessary—necessary—to keep so very straight, as regards women I mean, you know?"

"It is most necessary to appear to keep very straight," replies Mr. Wootton. The two things are obviously different to the meaneast capacity.

The young man sighs.

"And to have that—that appearance one must be married?"

"Indisputably. Marriage is as necessary to respectability in any great position as a brougham to a doctor, or a butler to a bishop," replies the elder, smiling compassionately at the wick of his candle.

He does not care a straw about the duke, he has no daughters to marry, and Mr. Wootton's social eminence is far beyond the power of dukes or princes to make or mend.

They are words of wisdom so profound that they sink deep into the soul of his pupil and fill him with a consternated sadness and perplexity. The temper of Lady Dawlish is a known quantity, and the quality of it is alarming. Lady Dawlish is not young, she is good-looking, and she has debts. Lord Dawlish has indeed hitherto let her pay her debts in any way she chose, being occupied enough in paying such of his own as he can, not by any dexterity avoid; but there is no knowing what he may do any day out of caprice or ill-nature, and although he will never obtain a divorce, he may try for one, which will equally effectually convulse the duke's county and the cathedral city which is situated in its center. His own affair with Lady Dawlish is, he firmly believes, known to no human being save themselves and their confidential servants; he little dreams that it has been the gossip of all London, until London grew tired of it; he is indeed aware that everybody invited them in the kindest manner together, but he attributed this coincidence to her tact in the management of her set and choice of her own engagements.

Arrived at his bedroom door, Mr. Wootton is touched vaguely with a kind feeling toward his humble interrogator, or with some other sentiment less kindly, it may be. He pauses, looks straight before him at the wick of his candle, and speaks with that oracular air so becoming to him, which many ungrateful people are known to loathe.

"That kind of connections are invariably dangerous; invariably," he remarks. "They have their uses, I admit, they have their uses; they mold a man's manners when he is young, they enable him to acquire great insight into female character, they keep him out of the lower sorts of entanglements, and they are useful in restraining him from premature marriage. But they are perilous if allowed to last too long. If permitted to claim privileges, rights, usurpations, they are apt to become irksome and compromising, especially if the lady be no longer young. When a woman is no longer young, there is a desperate ache in her tenacity about a last passion which is like that of a mariner clinging to a spar in the midst of a gusty sea. It is not easy for the spar to disengage itself. On the whole, therefore, women of rank are perhaps best avoided in this sense. Passions are safe which can be terminated by the check-book. The check-book is not always, indeed, refused by great ladies—when they are in debt—but a check-book is an unpleasant witness in the law courts. However,

THE HORRORS OF STOMACH TORTURE

INDIGESTION OF A LIFETIME PROMPTLY CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES."

Mrs. J. R. Flock, of London, Ont., for years received the best medical attention that Canada afforded.

Her husband was a prominent physician, yet his skill and that of his colleagues, was of no avail in helping Mrs. Flock.

She writes: "I was a constant martyr to Stomach Weakness all my life and no physician could cure me, but 'Fruit-a-tives' gave me entire relief and I cordially recommend this famous fruit medicine to the public."

"Fruit-a-tives" corrects all disorders of digestion, and is a positive and speedy cure for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa.

As I said before, all depends on the lady's temper; no woman who has a bad temper is ever truly discreet. Good-night to your grace, and Mr. Wootton with his candle disappears within his doorway.

CHAPTER VIII.

"Alan is really coming to-day!" says Dorothy Usk to her lord with pleasure a few days later, looking up from a telegram.

"How you excite yourself!" says Usk, with a rude disdain. "What can you see to care about? He is a pretentious humbug, if ever there was one."

"George!" She regards him with horror and amazement. Is he wholly out of his mind? Her cousin is Lady Usk's ideal of what an English gentleman should be. He does not keep black women down in Warwickshire.

"A pretentious humbug," repeats Usk. He likes to tickle his relations and connections with well-chosen descriptions. "All good looks and soft saviour; women like that sort of thing—"

"Of course we like good manners, though they are not your weakness," interrupts his wife with acerbity. "Alan has the manners of a man who respects women; that may seem very tame to you and your friend Blanford, but in these days it has at least the charm of novelty."

"Respects women!" Usk is unable to restrain his hilarity. "My dear Dolly, you're not a chicken; you can't mean that you don't know that Gervase—"

"I know that he is well-bred. You were so once, but it is a very long time ago," replies his wife with cutting sententiousness, and with that unkind reply she leaves him. As if she did not understand men better than he, she thinks, contemptuously. He may understand dogs and horses, and deer and partridges, but about human nature he knows no more than the old man at the lodge gates.

"Surely she can't be so soft on Gervase herself!" her husband reflects with a sensation of amusement; "it would be too funny after running so straight all these years, and just as her daughters are growing up—but they are often like that."

"He is not sure whether the idea diverted or irritated him, but he knows that he has always detested Gervase, such a coxcomb and such a humbug as the fellow is!"

"Respect women, good gracious!" ejaculated Usk, in his solitude.

"To be sure," adds that honest gentleman in his own mind. "There are very few of 'em who would thank you to respect 'em now-a-days."

"Gervase will be here by dinner," he says in the course of the day to Princess Sabaroff.

"Indeed," she replies, with indifference. "Who is he?"

"A friend of my wife's; at least a cousin. I thought you might know him; he was some time in Russia."

"No," there is a coldness in the negative, proportioned to the simple denial. "I do not think so. I do not remember such a name. Who is he?"

"A person who is expected to be great in foreign affairs some day or another," says Blanford. "He will have one qualification rare in an English foreign minister; daily growing rarer, thanks to the imbecilities of examinations; he knows how to bow and he knows what to say."

"A friend of yours?"

"Oh, no; an acquaintance. He thinks ill of me."

"Because I do nothing for my country. He thinks he does a great deal when he has fomented a quarrel or received a decoration."

"That is not gorgeous. The world owes much to diplomats; it will know how much in a few years, when it will be governed by clerks controlled by telephones."

"That is true; I had not corrected. But Gervase and I have few sympathies; none, indeed, except politically, and even there we differ—he is the Toryism of Peel, mine is the Toryism of the late Lord Derby—there are leagues between the two."

Bordered on the Grottoes In England In Queen Anne's Time.

At the restoration wigs began to be more generally worn, and in Queen Anne's reign they became the most costly item of gentlemen's wardrobes. Sir Richard Steele's "full buttoned black wig" cost 50 guineas (about $250), and the fashion became so enormous that Colley Cibber when playing "The Fool of Fashion" to satirize the styles introduced a wig of fat so large that it was brought on the stage in a sedan chair. As a matter of fact, the stagecoach lines were compelled to restrict the length of wig boxes to three feet.

John Taylor, one of the English minor poets, thus depicts the beards of his day:

Some seem as they were starched and fine, Like to the bristles of an angry swine, And some, to set their lovers' desire on edge, Are cut and pruned like a quick set hedge;

Some like a spade, some like a fork, some square, Some round, some mowed like stubble, some quite bare, Some sharp stiletto fashioned, dagger-like, That may in whispering a man's eye out-pique;

Some like a hammer cut or Roman T; These beards extravagant reformed must be;

Some with the quadrate, some triangle fashion, Some circular, some oval in translation; Some perpendicular in longitude, Some like a thicket for their crassitude;

Some height, depth, breadth, trifurcated, square, oval, round, And rules geometrical in beards abound.

GREAT ON STATISTICS.

But He Found His Wife Knew a Thing or Two About Them Also.

Mr. Ewing was "great on statistics," as his enthusiastic son put it. He read religiously and memorized all the little statistical items at the bottoms of the newspaper columns and was in the habit of referring to one of the well-known year books whenever a question arose as to the exact amount of wool imports or the population of a certain town. In this habit he took much pride.

"Now, you," he said to his wife one day, "are like most women, my dear, in that you have no head for figures. I dare say, for example, that you don't know how many negroes there are in this town."

"No, I don't," replied the lady and was going to say more, but he interrupted her.

"And I don't suppose you know the rate of the tariff on silk goods," he continued triumphantly, "and me in the business, too," he added.

"No, I don't," said his wife again, "but—"

"All these things," went on the man, "have their bearing on our daily lives. What is the matter, my dear?" he asked as he noticed his wife's eagerness to speak.

"Oh, nothing in particular, only I do wish you'd let me ask you some questions about statistics."

"Certainly, my dear," replied Mr. Ewing. "Anything that I don't happen to know out of my head I can easily look up in this almanac here."

And he placed his hand lovingly on the volume.

"Your speaking of useful statistics," said the woman, "made me think. What, for instance, is the size of your socks?"

"Why—why—you always buy them for me, my dear," replied her husband, smiling, "and I'm sure I can't say."

"What size are my stockings?" Mr. Ewing shook his head.

"What size are Mary's or Tommy's? What size shoes do they wear? How many pounds of meat do we need for dinner? What is the measurement of Tommy's waist?"

"Oh, I give it up," said Mr. Ewing in disgust. "What should I know of those things? I was talking about real statistics."

"But you said," returned his wife, "that women had no head for figures."

Trees to Rent.

"When I read on the business card of a decorator the legend, 'Trees to rent,' I was curious to know more about it and made inquiries," said an inquisitive man.

"I learned that one could rent trees in this city at $20 a tree for an occasion. The kind most in demand is the bay laurel, which in ancient times was held sacred to Apollo. These trees are raised in a large transportable box and stand about ten feet high. A pleasant aromatic odor is given off from the leaves. The tree is symbolic of victory in the arts of peace as well as victory in war. One man in this city has found a good business in maintaining a nursery of these scented trees."

Leigh Hunt's Grave.

In the serene silence of Kensal Green cemetery, London, Leigh Hunt's body lies at rest. A visitor, reaching over the iron fence to part the fragrant shrubs that shadow the tombstone, reads these words:

"Write me as one who loves his fellow men."

It was his own cheerful philosophy of life that Leigh Hunt expressed through the lips of his Abou Ben Adhem, and the sentiment is very touching come upon in this way.

On the Farm

SWINE ON DAIRY FARMS.

On dairy farms where the skimmed milk can be retained for use, the feeding of it to pigs can be made very profitable where the farmer has arrangements that are suited to the purpose all the year around. There should be suitable accommodations for cold weather, as with these and a fair supply of milk and grain and proper care the business can be made as profitable in winter as in summer, and often more so. And first there should be the selection of the breed thought to be best, all things considered, for the locality, paying particular attention to that of the sow for breeding purposes. These should be of the best type and form, docile and quiet, that will make good mothers, then keep them several years. This will be found more satisfactory than making frequent changes.

There should be at least two good litters of pigs in a year. The sows should have suitable quarters in winter, ample, comfortable and kept dry and well bedded. In summer they may run in a yard or small field where it will be better for sow and pigs than in a pen. The sows should be well cared for at all times, not fat, but in a thrifty, healthy condition.

A farmer with an average-sized dairy should have at least one good brood sow or more where needed. One will usually furnish enough pigs to grow up and fatten on the farm, at least, and this means quite a saving when otherwise they would have to be purchased. From the returns from this one sow a good sum should be realized either from pigs sold at weaning time, or as fattened on the farm.

My attention was lately called to a thrifty, good-looking Berkshire sow, that the owner stated had reared 21 out of 33 pigs for the first year. These had either been sold or were valued at $69 at four to five weeks old at going prices. This would more than equal the average product of the dairy cow, while the cost of keeping would be considerably less.

This is certainly a good record for the first of any year, and at usual prices.

On 20-cow farms there should be an income of from $100 to $150 from pigs grown and fattened on the farm. There should be two broods of these and each should be grown and fattened in six months' time. This will require some grain along with the milk, but the process should be continuous from weaning to slaughtering time, and this will require some attention and care.

The prices for meats are now proportionally higher than for grain, so it will pay to feed as liberally as seems to be necessary.

And then there is another thing that should be considered in connection with this business, and that is the making of quick, a large amount of excellent manure, that is so much needed on about every farm.

The crops grown from the use of this manure should go a long way in furnishing or growing the grain that will be needed in fattening the pigs. This is something that should be well considered.

Farmers should raise more pigs. Go into the business understandingly, give it all needed attention, and see if the results are not satisfactory, as the writer has found them to be.—E. R. Towle, in Hoard's Dairying.

MANURE FOR HAY LAND.

Wheat, corn and other crops are no more improved by rotation than hay. The Minnesota Experiment Station shows that a plot of fifteen years has given an average yield of 1.75 tons per acre, while on a plot under a three-years rotation of wheat, clover and corn, hay has yielded, the past ten years, an average of 2.9 tons per acre. In a five-year rotation of wheat, timothy and clover, pasture, oats and corn, the hay has yielded an average of 3.9 tons per acre, since 1900. Eight tons of manure per acre were applied once in five years on the five-year rotation plots. There is money in manure.

"No," snapped the sharp-faced woman at the door, "I ain't got no food for you, an' I ain't got no old clothes. Now go!" "Lady," replied Cambridge, "give me a course meal, and I'll give you a few lessons in grammar."

PLANT CIRCULATION.

Comparable With the Circulation of Blood in Animals.

It is generally known that plants have a circulation comparable with the circulation of blood in animals, but it is not so well known that the force of liquid propulsion is vastly greater than any animal's blood pressure, even the elephant's. The force of an animal's blood as it circulates through the largest arteries is incapable of raising a column of water over seven feet high, whereas the force of a plant's sap, even of a small vine, can raise a column of water from forty to eighty feet high, exerting a pressure of over two atmospheres.

The way this is shown in the laboratory is to tear off a small branch of a tree and fix it air tight into a rubber large short tube filled with water. To the bottom end of the thick tube is attached a small thin tube filled with colored water and having its lower end immersed in a vessel of colored water. This experiment simply shows the rate of absorption of fluid by a plant. The colored water is seen to rise in the small tube at a comparatively rapid rate, an inch or so a minute. To show the height to which the pressure can force water, a tube has to be fitted into the bark of a plant and the root supplied with water.

Hales first showed this with a small vine, which he severed and to which he applied a tube. The fluid rose to over forty feet. De Candolle tried other plants and in one instance secured a height of eighty feet or over two atmospheres' pressure. The cause of this force was long considered due to capillary attraction caused by the hairlike tubes in plants. This failing to account for the enormous force developed, a microscopic examination showed that these vessels had a progressive contracting motion similar to that in the arteries of animals and that the explanation in each case was the same.

Thus the vitality or principle of life that allows this motion is in all cases the direct cause.

The Great Census.

The great military genius Gode was a precocious boy. At eight he understood Latin, and at eleven he gave out a treatise on rhetoric. When fourteen he had become thoroughly conversant with the principles of warfare and of all military tactics.

It's surprising how many things a girl can learn at a boarding school that will never be of any use to her.

Centre Hastings Teachers' Institute

The Centre Hastings Teachers' Annual Convention was held in the Methodist Church, Marmora, Sept. 29th and 30th.

The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. by the President, Mr. E. T. Williams, of Stirling. In a few well chosen words, Mr. Moore, pastor of the Methodist Church, Marmora, welcomed the teachers and presented to them the use of the Church. The treasurer's report was read by the secretary. After discussion it was moved by Mr. Mackintosh, I. P. S., and seconded by Mr. Meiklejohn, to divide the funds with North Hastings.

Carried. Mr. Mackintosh and Mr. Meiklejohn were appointed to make this division. Mr. Noble and Miss Corbett were appointed auditors. A nominating committee, consisting of Mr. Meiklejohn, Miss Breakell, Mr. Sanderson, Mr. Sharpe, Miss Henderson, Miss Holdcroft and Miss Kelso, was appointed to nominate officers for the coming year.

The first paper was Art to Junior Classes by Miss M. Hay, of Stirling Public School. She outlined her method in a most interesting way and presented the advantages derived from the teaching of this subject. She had with her some specimens of work done by Junior pupils. These showed the excellent work that can be done in a short time with Junior pupils. A discussion followed in which several took part.

Mr. Sharpe then gave an excellent and carefully prepared paper on Oral Reading. After outlining his plan of teaching the subject, he gave many valuable suggestions to be followed, namely:—reading should be natural, phrasing should be used, as the neglect of phrasing was bad reading for pupils and teacher to get the dictionary habit; to prepare the thought, to know the literature before reading; to urge the pupils to read at home; time, place, and mood of writer must be a part of the good reader. The paper was full of wise steps and most helpful guides for the successful teaching of Oral Reading. The discussion which followed showed the interest which had been aroused.

AFTERNOON SESSION

Work was resumed at 2 p. m., president in the chair.

Health in the School-room was very fully discussed in a most interesting address by Mr. Meiklejohn, of Tweed. He dwelt particularly on the importance of ventilation for every building, the evils resulting from impure air, impure food and impure water. He gave several valuable hints to improve the sanitary conditions of school property. These schemes he has tried himself and recommended their use. Discussion followed.

Mr. Walker, B. A., Principal of Peterboro Normal School was then introduced and gave an address, General Discussion of Place, Method, and Material in teaching Arithmetic. After a few introductory remarks, he showed the position Arithmetic occupies with respect to other subjects. It holds a foremost place on account of its culture value. This culture value is summed up in accuracy, neatness, power of expression, concentration, and critical analysis, all essentially special to Arithmetic.

Arithmetic is important for its practical value and should have a practical bearing on the different stages of life. The method of teaching must be determined by necessities. Pupils must be taught accuracy and rapidity so that they can apply these. Problems must be made practical and so that they can understand them. The material in teaching should be concrete as far as possible in order to teach properly and to show that process is understood. A discussion followed in which many questions were answered and difficulties cleared away in a kind and helpful way by Mr. Walker.

Mr. Kennedy, B. A., Principal of Stirling High School then gave an excellent and instructive address on Practical Nature Study. He showed the great value of Nature Study as it trains the faculties as no other subject, trains the observation, and gives a wider outlook. Nature well repays her students. It has a great culture value in the making of citizens. He urged teachers to learn and teach the different weeds, particularly the destructive ones; for the pupils to take their knowledge home; to learn how to destroy them. Insect life is an important part of this great study. The harmful ones and their destruction should be learned. He recommended the use of the following books, Insect Life by Comstock and Insects by Howard. He dwelt on Bird Life briefly and regretted that it was very little understood. Teachers man. The paper was most interesting and was listened to with great attention.

The afternoon session was brought to a close with roll call by Mr. Mackintosh.

In the evening a large audience listened to a lecture by G. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture. His Future. A choice musical programme was rendered by Mrs. F. S. Pearce and Dr. Jones, of Marmora and Mr. S. B. Wright, of Deloro.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 30TH.

Work was resumed at 9 a. m. The treasurer's report was presented, having been audited, and was received by the association.

The following officers were then elected for the coming year: Hon. Pres.—Mr. Mackintosh, I. P. S. President—Mr. G. A. Meiklejohn. 1st Vice Pres.—G. E. Kennedy, B. A. 2nd Vice Pres.—Miss Corbett. Secretary—Mr. L. M. Sharpe. Treasurer—Mr. J. B. Morton.

Committee representing the different sections:—Madoc Tr., Miss Wallace, Mr. Sanderson; Madoc V., Miss Breakell; Elzevir, Mr. Noble; Hun- gford, Mr. R. A. Morton; Marmora, Miss Kelso; Rayn, Miss Henderson; Miss Simmons; Tweed, Mr. Wilson; Stirling, Miss Hay.

Mr. Meiklejohn, on behalf of Tweed School Board and Tweed Village, extended an invitation to hold the next meeting of Centre Hastings Teachers' Institute in Tweed and made a motion to that effect, seconded by Mr. Morton. It was unanimously decided to go to Tweed.

A discussion then followed regarding a Weed Collection which was to be made and exhibited at the next annual meeting. It was moved by Mr. Mackintosh, seconded by Mr. Sharpe, and carried that a committee consisting of Mr. Kennedy of Stirling, Mr. McIntosh, Representative of the Department of Agriculture, and Mr. Mackintosh, I. P. S., would frame regulations and issue a circular in connection with the matter in hand.

Mr. Walker then gave another of his instructive addresses on "Treatment of some of the Elementary Problems of Arithmetic for Primary Grades." Here he referred to the empirical stage—that stage which is based on the child's investigation of Arithmetic. It is always necessary to appeal to the sense and the basis of number must be quantity. The second stage is comparison—the child compares new facts with old ones. The third stage must test how much number the child really knows. He outlined with materials his method of teaching numbers, the new number always being presented as a whole. The child must be given something definite to count. He urged the teachers to make no haste in Arithmetic in Primary Grades. Notation must be taught on concrete objects. He warned against the use of type forms of solutions—let the pupil get his own solution in his own way first. The keynote of this address was teach them drill, drill, drill. A discussion followed and Mr. Walker answered several questions and gave explanations.

A Show of Suggestions from Experience" was the subject of the next address and was given by Mr. Mackintosh, I. P. S. This address was very practical, and laid before the teachers their duty. To succeed teachers must have an intelligent grasp of the subject. For success, hard work is needed, also preparation for daily work, preparation not only with subject matter, but with method. He warned the teachers against becoming mere creatures of routine. The teacher must inculcate moral principles. Encourage honesty and avoid methods that will prompt dishonesty. The chief work of the teacher is not to "inform" but to "question." Great care was to be taken with the slow and backward pupils. Oral examinations were of the greatest importance, if conducted properly. To teach thoroughly there must be drill. Mr. Mackintosh closed his address by urging the teachers to make the boys "manly" and the girls "womanly"—not to do the work for them, but to train them.

Here a pleasing and unexpected feature was introduced in the form of a motion by Mr. Sharpe, teacher at West Huntingdon. "MR. PRESIDENT AND FELLOW-TEACHERS:—

A few years ago, I was called very suddenly to stand at the side of an open casket to pay the last tribute of visible respect to one that was most beloved of any outside of my own home-circle; and there I learned one of my most deeply impressed lessons, viz., that we should endeavor to live to our best friends and neighbors, rather than to have only the opportunity of placing flowers upon their cold remains."

"I am informed that thirty-six years have passed, years of zealous labour and toil for him, since our Inspector first entered upon this field of duty—the then Inspector of North Hastings. Of those years histories might be written as stirring as any romance, and in many of these most interesting facts no name is more worthy of note than his. We who are among the older of the teachers know well the faithful way in which he has fulfilled the difficult demands, going into the more remote scenes, into the old log school with the one window or the homes with few of the luxuries of life, yet abounding in hospitality, under all conditions and at various times. We saw him in the heat of summer and again when the frost had tinged his beard as faithfully as the years have since done and though sometimes we were impatient owing to the fires of youth or self-will we knew how much we did not know, in Goldsmith's words we must say:—

"Yet he was kind or if severe in taught, The love he bore to learning was in fault."

"Therefore, under the impulse of the sad lesson which I first expressed and deeply impressed by the great change and growth which he has so manifestly aided, most just and worthwhile it is at this first Session of the Teachers' Institute of Centre Hastings, held in the Village of Marmora, that we memorialize our appreciation of, and confidence in, Mr. Mackintosh as an Inspector and our gratitude to the County Council and the Education Department have thus honoured him by returning him to the charge of Centre Hastings and praying that he may so remain for many years to come, in much pleasure in moving a resolution to this effect."

The motion was seconded by Mr. Meiklejohn. In seconding the motion Mr. Meiklejohn of Tweed spoke of his twenty-nine years of teaching, most of which were in Mr. Mackintosh's inspectorate. He said that often he felt the Inspector was hard and exacting, now he knew it had been for his own good. He urged the young teachers to pay attention to and act on the many suggestions they might receive from Mr. Mackintosh. In presenting the motion Mr. Williams said he had taught 32 years in Mr. Mackintosh's inspectorate and found each visit of the Inspector helpful.

The motion was carried by a standing vote (on the suggestion of the second) and a spontaneous clapping of hands, and was feelingly responded to by the Inspector who said he had always tried to keep before him the best interest of the Inspectorate.

AFTERNOON SESSION

Work was resumed at 1 p. m. Mr. Walker gave another address, the subject being "Percentage and Commercial Arithmetic for Senior Grades." He showed that commercial arithmetic was based on Primary work. Before teaching, the pupils must have a clear understanding of what percentage means. There is nothing new in percentage after fractions have been taught. In the commercial work, the actual transaction in business methods should be gone through. In this way it can be made more practical and will be of more use to the pupils after leaving school.

Moved by Mr. Morton, seconded by Mr. Sanderson, that a hearty vote of thanks be tendered to Mr. Walker for the excellent and instructive addresses which he had delivered. Mr. Walker replied in a few well chosen words.

Votes of thanks were tendered to the retiring president, Mr. E. T. Williams, and the secretary, Miss Feeney, for their services.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the Trustee Board of the Marmora Methodist Church for the use of their beautiful and comfortable church during the convention.

The first annual meeting of Centre Hastings Teachers' Institute was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

The Business of Home Making

One of the liveliest, most intelligent articles on home furnishing that we have read in a long time is in October Canadian Home Journal. The plea is "To go slow and choose carefully."

A few paragraphs gives an idea of the writer's theory.
"I think the best plan is to start the home with only the immediate necessities—and even these can, if circumstances insist, be far more modest than one plans to possess ultimately."

"One couple I know, with an ideal home today, started with wicker furniture throughout, the simplest of wall treatments, and artistic but not expensive grass rugs. Then gradually they have picked up piece by piece a houseful of the most charming furniture you can imagine. And just as carefully and with just as fine a discrimination they have decorated their walls in harmony, found the pictures they can cherish and prize, and replaced their rugs with fine examples of modern and Oriental weaves. Incidentally, there are fewer gew-gaws and gim-crack knick-knacks in that home than in any other I visit. Each room irradiates a spirit of real "homeyness" of harmony and taste that professional decorators accomplishing everything at one fell swoop fail utterly to catch."

Of so many people who start out with a misconception of what furnishing and decorating a home really is—a life work of love—and wish to have everything ready made and waiting for them. If they are well-to-do, their house will likely be turned over to "Framen and Sickner, Decorators in all periods" and when they return from Florida, Europe or wherever the honeymoon has led them, they settle down in the new house with about as much feeling of home as one can have in an hotel, or furnished apartment decorated with Louis Sixteenth furniture, art nouveau paper and turkish rugs."

And if they are not well-to-do they will fill the house with credit bought furniture, decorate (?) the walls with cheap papers and the mantels with plaster of paris casts and terra cotta dogs—utterly respectable of course—but!—All of which will be selected very much in haste and repented just as much at leisure."

We are glad to see the Journal giving space to some of the finer sides of woman's home life as well as so thoroughly dealing with the necessities, fashions, cookery, and other household doings. The cover is a beauty and any woman may be proud to display it on the library table.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
OCT. 9.

Lesson II. The Parable of the Talents, Matt. 25. 14-30. Golden Text, Matt. 25. 21.

Verses 14. A man—Christ, as a merchant, whose chief interest is to increase his possessions by careful investment.

Going into another country—Same word as in Matt. 21. 33. Not "a far country," as in Authorized Versions. Christ is never a great way off from his servants. All that is intended is that in visible presence he is removed from them for a time while they trade for him. Why he goes away is not indicated. In the parable of the pounds the nobleman goes to "receive for himself a kingdom."

His own servants—Indicating that they are on terms of intimacy with their master. This makes it possible for him to assign the talents according to their several abilities. It also gives them their knowledge of his will, so that he does not need to instruct them as to the use they are to make of the goods. They know without being told, that they are to trade till he returns (Luke 19. 13).

15. Talents—See Word Studies for July 31. Five talents would be something over $5,000, a large sum to intrust to a servant. Some servants of the kingdom are rarely endowed, God lavishing upon them his graces and advantages. But such also have heavier obligations than the man of two talents. The man of one talent, on the other hand, though less freely endowed, is not to despise the opportunity which he has in his own sphere. All are to remember that the talents are not gifts outright, but sacred trusts of which each is to make the very utmost.

16. Straightway—Note the difference here between the two versions. The Revision gives better point to the story, and is grammatically correct. The merit of the first servant is, that he lost no time in doing with his money exactly what his lord had intended—traded, and made other five talents. The immediate and sole business of Christ's service, and to secure as large a return as possible.

17. Gained other two—That is, by dint of unreserved devotion to his master's interests, though he has less working capital, he does as well as his fellow of five talents, because he doubles what he has received.

18. Hid his lord's money—He might at least have doubled it by careful investment. By depositing it in the earth, he not only keeps it from diminution, which seems like an innocent enough ruse, but prevents the legitimate increase it might have had in other hands.

19. After a long time the lord... cometh—Suggesting that the slothful servant had plenty of time to profit by the example of his fellows. A man's probation is extended until the last grain of possibility of his turning is exhausted. None can say in the day of reckoning that his failure was due to a lack of opportunity.

21. Faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many—This throws light upon the life hereafter. Reward for fidelity is not to be an unemployed period of quiet, but an opportunity for continued service, and service on a larger scale. The endowment of five talents will seem small in comparison to the nobler heritage of heaven.

23. His lord said unto him, Well done—Just as he had said to the five-talent man. The commendation and reward are precisely the same, showing that what counts in the end is, not rich natural or spiritual endowment, but high devotion to Him whom we serve. Since both were equally zealous and achieved the same result, they were received with equal warmth.

24. I knew thee that thou art a hard man—This is an excuse rather than a reason. Long before his lord returned his heart must have smitten him with the conviction that he ought to dig up the talent and put it into the current of trade. But now, when all opportunity has fled, he tries to throw the responsibility upon the master: "Is he not a man of greed, who without copiousness reaps dishonest riches from other men's toil?"

25. I was afraid—As a matter of fact, this sole, unpardonable fault was, that he was lazy. Fear lest he should fail to make a fair profit from his investment is simply feigned.

26. Thou knowest—He convicts the servant out of his own mouth; for, if the charge were true (and the master makes no attempt to justify himself from it), then this wicked servant, who now tries to deceive his lord, had he not been shamefully slothful, would at least have taken this one talent and deposited it with the bankers, where it could draw interest (27). This only shows that it was his laziness, and not his false estimate of his lord's character, that led him to hide the money. If Christ's one-talent workers feel themselves unequal to any independent profitable investment of their meager gifts, they can at least associate themselves with the more richly endowed, and these will show them the method of increase.

28. Failure to use one's gifts will at last result in inability to use them. There is a spiritual as well as a physical atrophy. Christ at last dismisses from his service those who fritter away their opportunities in idleness. It cannot excuse us that only a little has been committed to our charge. The administration of the talents is not overlooked by our Lord and Master.

29. Unto every one that hath—This is a law of life. As diatribe ends in final loss, so wise and faithful use results in increase. There was a Jewish saying, "He who increases not decreases."

30. Cast ye out the unprofitable servant—His terrible punishment is simply on account of uselessness. How much more severe ought the condemnation to have been if he had squandered away the money of his master! If we wish in the end to come in from the outer darkness and enjoy the friendly light of the banquet hall, we must not shrink from risking our talents, however slight, in the service of Him who, though exacting to the last degree, trod the hard way for us, that we might escape the bitterness of the weeping and the gnashing.

A NEW INDUSTRY.

Port Arthur Wagon Co. Offering of Preferred Stock.

The prospectus of the Port Arthur Wagon Company, limited, appears for the first time in this issue.

The company has certainly a very strong and influential board, of which Chris. Kloeffer, of Guelph, is president; D. C. Cameron, the president of the Maple Leaf Milling Company, Limited, vice-president.

In locating the factory at Port Arthur the directors have taken a wise step, as that point is nearly 1,000 miles nearer the western market than any other wagon factory in Canada. As a result the saving in freight will be very great.

Perhaps the best feature is that the company has already contracts in hand to keep them running for years with reliable firms: The John Deere Plow Company, Limited, and the Tadhope Anderson Company, Limited.

It is well known that firms requiring wagons during the last two years have been unable to obtain them, owing to the demand being much larger than the supply. In fact, many thousands dollars' worth have been imported from the States under a heavy duty.

The city of Port Arthur has granted very valuable concessions in order to induce the company to locate there. These include twenty acres of land, a large dock site and exemption from taxation. The manner in which the west is developing will make the dock of immense value, as the geographical position of Port Arthur has made that city the gateway to the west.

The company is giving a bonus of 50 per cent. of common stock to all subscribers of preferred, which makes the issue extremely inviting, and one which will yield a good return to investors.

NEWSPAPER OFFICE WRECKED

Nineteen Killed in Wreck of Los Angeles Times Building.

A despatch from Los Angeles, California, says:—An attempt to destroy the residence of General Harrison Gray Otis, publisher of The Los Angeles Times, by an infernal machine was made on Saturday following an explosion which earlier in the day killed nineteen men and destroyed the buildings and plant of The Times, and a suspected effort to blow up the auxiliary plant of that paper. A powerful infernal machine was also found on Saturday in the residence of Secretary Zechapelaar of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

General Otis, who is on his way home from Mexico, and other responsible heads of The Times unequivocally charge the Times building disaster and the narrowly averted attempts at further destruction of life and property to labor union sources. The leaders of union labor repudiate the accusation, and offer all aid in their power to detect the culprits.

GRAVE IN DEEP WELL.

Unique Funeral Service at Kam-sack, Saskatchewan.

A despatch from Kam-sack, Sask., says: A funeral service, attended by circumstances that are unique in the history of Canada, took place Saturday on the farm of John Bowes, 16 miles south of here. At the top of a 73-foot shaft that had been sunk for a well, and at the bottom of which lay the remains of Eywer Olson, aged 39, of Yorkton, Rev. J. Morrison conducted the service for the dead. The shaft has been closed up, and the body will remain in this deep grave. Olson was overcome by coal gas while digging the well.

NEW COMPANY A GOING CONCERN.

The PORT ARTHUR WAGON COMPANY, LIMITED, is a new Company, but will commence business under the most favorable auspices, having agreed to take over the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, of Markham, which is a going concern with a production capacity of four thousand wagons per year, and having its entire output for the ensuing year already sold. The intention is to transfer the operations of the Company to a new factory to be erected at Port Arthur.

UNSURPASSED LOCATION OF PLANT.

The location of the new factory is without doubt the finest in Canada, and will be situated on the shore of Thunder Bay at Port Arthur. It is unequaled for the assembling of materials required in manufacturing wagons and sleighs, and has a commanding position in regard to the facilities for handling its freight by rail and water, which gives the Company a great advantage over its competitors.

CONCESSIONS.

The Company has obtained valuable concessions from the City of Port Arthur, which include a grant of twenty acres of land, a 200-foot dock site, and exemption from taxation for twenty years, except local improvement and school rates. The City of Port Arthur further guarantees bonds of the Company to the extent of $100,000.00 at 5% for twenty years.

NEW FACTORY 815 MILES NEARER THE GREAT NORTHWEST MARKET.

The new factory will be fireproof, built in the most modern style, equipped with machinery embodying all the latest improvements, and thoroughly up to date in every detail, with a capacity for turning out 10,000 wagons a year. The advantages derived by the Company in locating at Port Arthur are numerous, the chief one being, perhaps, the enormous saving in freight, Port Arthur being 30 cents per 100 lbs. nearer the market than any other wagon factory in Canada. This alone gives a saving in freight of $3.50 per wagon. Coal can be delivered from the American ports to Port Arthur at a freight rate of 32½ cents per ton as compared with 90 cents per ton to Woodstock and $1.00 to Petrolia.

CONTRACTS.

This Company has a contract with the John Deere Plow Co., Limited, of Winnipeg, for supplying its total requirements of wagons and sleighs. That Company states that its requirements for the year 1911 will be 4,500 wagons and 1,500 sleighs.

The Company has a further contract with the Tadhope, Anderson Company, Ltd., of Winnipeg, to supply it with wagons for a period of five years, with a minimum average of 2,000 wagons per year and a maximum of 5,000 wagons per year.

It is well known that thousands of farmers are annually pouring into the Northwest, and it is confidently estimated that the above requirements will be more than doubled in the near future. Last year an immense number of wagons was imported into Canada and sold in the Northwest, upon which a duty of 25% was paid.

RAW MATERIALS.

This Company will be able to obtain much of its raw material in its immediate vicinity, thereby effecting a saving of many dollars in freight. With all the advantages enumerated, it is certain that within a very short time the plant will be taxed to its full extent.

MANAGEMENT.

The Company has been fortunate in being able to secure the services of Mr. T. H. Speight as its Manager. He has been associated with the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, for the past eighteen years, and is widely known for his integrity and business ability.

The following certificate has been prepared and certified by Messrs. Jenkins & Hardy, of Toronto, Chartered Accountants:—

H. BATEMAN FOX, ESQ.,

Secretary-Treasurer Port Arthur Wagon Co., Limited:

Dear Sir,—We have examined the books of The Speight Wagon Company, Ltd., at Markham, Ont., for the period December 1st, 1909, to July 31st, 1910, and certify that based upon the contract sale prices to the John Deere Plow Company, Limited, the net profit on its sales was 14%.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) JENKINS & HARDY,
Chartered Accountants.

ESTIMATED PROFITS

It is estimated that the sales of wagons, sleighs, wagon parts and trucks for the first year will amount to $375,000. The profit of 14% upon this amount is $52,500.

No estimate has been taken of the saving in freight by reason of manufacturing point being nearer the market, and the closer proximity to points at which lumber can be more advantageously purchased and delivered than at Markham, Petrolia, Woodstock or Chatham, nor of any profits accruing to Company from rentals of dock, etc.

A further saving will also be made by the Company by reason of its freedom from all taxation (except school and local improvement taxes) for a period of twenty years.

INTEREST CHARGES

Annual interest charge on $400,000 preferred 7% stock $28,000 00
Annual interest charge on $100,000 5% bonds (guaranteed by City of Port Arthur) 5,000 00

Leaving a balance of $19,500 00

The consideration for the transfer of the above assets is seven hundred and fifty shares of the preferred stock of the Port Arthur Wagon Company, Limited, five thousand dollars in cash, and the Port Arthur Wagon Company, Limited, is also to pay for the actual stock-in-trade of the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, in cash at cost price.

MONTREAL SWEEP BY STORM.

Two Men Were Killed and Great Damage to Property.

A despatch from Montreal says: A violent wind and rain storm swept over Montreal on Saturday afternoon, carrying death and destruction in its wake. Two men were killed, three are in the city hospitals and scores of people were injured more or less seriously, but were not treated at the hospitals. Thousands of dollars' worth of damage was done in all sections of the city, particularly along the water front and in the uptown district. It was just about 1 o'clock when the skies, threatening all morning, became particularly black and fifteen minutes later the elements broke loose and for a quarter of an hour there raged one of the most furious and destructive storms that has been experienced in Montreal in many years.

Terrible Loss of Life by Fire

A terrible state of suffering comes from northern Minnesota and the Rainy River District in Ontario caused by bush fires, which, fanned by a gale of wind on Saturday, developed into a perfect cyclone of fire, wiping out several towns in Minnesota and causing considerable damage in the town of Rainy River, Ont.

The fire spread so rapidly that many were unable to escape and it is estimated that the loss of life is not less than 800, and may possibly reach 1,000.

There have been bush fires in that district all summer and these were the commencement of the terrible fires that have caused such destruction. The tract of country burned over is said to be 85 miles long by 30 wide and besides the great loss of life, has caused the destruction of millions of dollars worth of property.

A despatch from Winnipeg states that the prairie fires are raging east of that city, and that the village of Lorette had been destroyed.

Girl Burglar Committed

Mabel McMillan, the young girl, who was arrested in Trenton on October 2nd, on the charge of having unlawfully broken into and entered into the residence of Sheriff M. B. Morrison, Belleville, on the night of Sept 29th, and stole furs and a gown belonging to Mrs. Morrison, and a feather stole belonging to Mrs. Netta Wright, came before Magistrate Masson for a preliminary hearing. There were quite a number in the court to see the girl charged with the theft. She is tall and slight and gave but little indication of a pilfering nature. She wept all the time she was in the police court. No evidence was taken except the testimony of Sergeant Nathan, who made the arrest, and to whom the girl told the story of the robbery. His worship considered that there was sufficient evidence to send the accused up for trial. He thereupon signed her committal. Mr. Anderson appeared for the crown and Mr. Carnew for the defendant.

The parents of the prisoner, who are highly respected residents of the north country, will be communicated with at once. It is likely the trial will take place in about a week. The furs, princess gowns and feather stole have been returned to their owners on the understanding that they be produced if necessary at the trial.—Belleville Ontario.

A New Drink Cure

An Iowa medical man who has been experimenting extensively with apples as a cure for drinking liquor claims to have secured remarkable results. He says he has cured hundreds of drinkers by feeding them apples, and they wanted to drink and his claims are seriously regarded by an organization that is prominent in temperance work. This organization has sent out many copies of a leaflet in which it is stated that habitual drinkers as a rule do not eat apples. "There seems to be a peculiar combination in apples," the leaflet declares, "that allays the irritation, or so-called appetite produced by the use of liquor."

It is the intention of the local optionists to prove that a modern hotel can be conducted on satisfactory and paying basis without a bar. The King's was built a couple of years ago at an estimated cost of half a million dollars.

Hoarseness in a child subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given at once or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Contains no poison. Sold by all dealers.

Blown Down by the Gale

During the gale which prevailed on Saturday, Oct. 1st, both chimneys on the new public school building at Trenton were blown down. The "Courier" says:

"The chimney on the north side of the building not only broke through the roof, but plunged on down through the ceiling into the class room beneath. Had any pupils been at their desks the results could easily be imagined."

"Many rumors are rife concerning the condition of the building. Some place the blame for the apparent improper construction of it, on the Board, others on the builder and architect. It seems, however, that a number of causes operated simultaneously, with the results already described. The chimneys were far too high without having any exterior braces to steady them. When they were being erected, the contractor, Mr. Crowe, urged the School Board to make this provision and have the chimneys braced. But the Board considered differently, with the above result."

"The event has caused very much discontent among the ratepayers, and well it might. Besides the heavy loss in money, and the danger that their little ones were in owing to the faulty construction, there is the disquieting conviction that the remainder of the building may not be in any better condition."

Encouraging Industry

It is strange that the Ontario law, which allows a municipality to grant bonuses and to make the most improvident bargains for the purpose of obtaining industries, will not allow those municipalities to encourage all industry in the straightforward and sensible way; namely, by exempting or partly exempting improvements, and increasing the taxation on unimproved lands. In fact it may fairly be said that the worse way is not deliberately chosen, but is taken because the Legislature will not allow the municipality to take the better and the wiser way. The municipality believes that industry should be encouraged, which is an absolutely sound view. The logical conclusion is not that one manufacturing concern should be favored, but that every person who builds a factory, a store, or a dwelling, should be encouraged and rewarded, instead of being penalized as he is now. A just and wise system of assessment would probably put an end to the improvident bonusing of industries.—Toronto Star.

The Good Citizen

Some man is always before the crowd, the nation's hero, of whom we're proud! We yell and dance when we hear his name, we swear he's gathered immortal fame; we find his picture on every page when the papers come to our hermitage, and our heads swell up for half a mile if the great man gives us a pleasant smile. But the man who's making the country great is not a fellow of high estate. He doesn't ride in a palace car and tell the crowds what his pipe dreams are. He doesn't hold that the corner rock of the government is a mass of talk. He does his work and he saves his wood; his life is clean and his credit good; he loves his home and he loves his wife and he doesn't yearn for the circus life; he pays his debts and he goes to church, and helps his neighbor who's in the lurch. He doesn't lecture his fellow man, who's doubtless doing the best he can. He shuns the noise of the world's applause, his hands are busy and not his jaws; he walks through life with a fearless tread, and dies at last like a thoroughbred. WALT MASON.

The Dominion Technical Committee has been visiting different places taking evidence as regards technical education. At Brantford, Prof. Robertson, the chairman, said, that from what the Commission had already learned it was an easy possibility that within twenty years, with a system of technical education in agriculture alone, Ontario's farm products of 200 millions annually could be doubled. Mr. T. H. Preston strongly advocated raising the age limit for compulsory school attendance to 16 years, the enforcement of a truancy act, and state assistance for large families, where a number of children had to be educated.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has become famous for its cures of coughs, colds, croup and influenza. Try it when in need. It contains no harmful substance and always gives prompt relief. Sold by all dealers.

THE PORTUGUESE RISING

Description of Street Fighting, With Which the Revolution Began.

The London Daily Mail, in a special despatch from Lisbon, dated Wednesday, says the first sign of revolt was the presence of rioters parading the streets on Monday night and exciting the populace by versions of the assassination of the Republican member for Lisbon, Dr. Bombarda. Early on Tuesday morning the rioters, evidently by a prearranged plan, fired their signal outside the barracks of the 10th Regiment of Infantry. Then trouble began. The soldiers, after murdering their captain, Celastino Costa, burst into the armory and distributed arms to the people. Then they sallied forth to the 1st Artillery quarters, who joined the revolt. Afterwards the soldiers signalled the news to the warships in the Tagus.

At the same time men in a motor car attacked the arsenal with bombs in an effort to gain entrance, but were repelled. Several guards of the arsenal were killed. A general alarm was given, and troops filled the streets, concentrating in the squares. There was the greatest difficulty in maintaining communication, as the streets were impassable, the Municipal Guards then loyal to the throne, forbidding all traffic. The trains ceased to run, for the lines were cut by the Republicans, who were later most thorough in the measures they took.

I am now writing at dawn on Wednesday. There has been a terrifying cannonade all night long, and it is now increasing in violence. The artillery from Santarém, forty-five miles away, have arrived and joined the Republicans. An attack is being made on the Carmo convent, the stronghold of the Municipal Guards. Shrapnel bullets are falling like hail around the windows, smashing the glass. As I write the Municipal Guards under the windows of the office of The Mundo, a Republican newspaper, have just been shot dead. The ambulances are full of dead, and are constantly passing. The Red Cross is hoisted all over the town, even on the newspaper offices. The streets are deserted, except for the troops, and the bakeries have been raided by the soldiers for bread.

At 8 o'clock on Wednesday morning I was informed that the high-est loyalist troops had hoisted the white flag and had surrendered to the Republicans. Suddenly the streets were filled with crowds shouting "Viva Republica!" The people then began rushing down to the Avenida da Liberdade. The Municipal Guards, who were absolutely heroic in their defence, have also now surrendered. It is now 1 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, and the Republic of Portugal has been proclaimed at the Town Hall amid the enthusiasm of the people.

KING MANUEL AT GIBRALTAR
A despatch from Gibraltar says: King Manuel of Portugal is now under British protection. The Portuguese royal yacht Amelie, having on board the king, the queen mother, the dowager queen, and the Duke of Oporto, entered this harbor at eleven o'clock on Thursday evening. Shortly afterwards the king and the queen mother came ashore, and drove to the summer residence of the governor, Sir Frederick Forestier-Walker, at Europa Point.

QUEBEC BRIDGE TENDERS

Germany, the United States and England
Send One Each--Two From Canada.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Only four countries were able to produce firms big enough to undertake the building of the Quebec bridge, and three of these countries produced only one such firm each. The tenders for the superstructure of the bridge with its eighteen hundred foot cantilever span were opened on Wednesday by Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways.

The firms which put in tenders were:—
The Maschinenfabrik Augsburg-nürnberg, Germany.
Pennsylvania Steel Company of Philadelphia.

The British Empire Bridge Company of Montreal.
The Darlington, Manchester & Cleveland, England, Bridge Companies combine in one tender.
The St. Lawrence Bridge Company, which is a combination of the Canadian Bridge Company of Walkerville and the Lachine Bridge Company of Montreal.

It will take some time to figure out the tenders, as they are made in detail on the various shapes which enter into the construction of the bridge. The tenders will be turned over to the Commission, and they will estimate the amount of each and decide which is the lowest.

GUARDING AGAINST CHOLERA

Meeting of Steamship Passenger Managers at Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: The Atlantic steamship lines are preparing for the worst that can possibly come, so far as the health of their westbound passengers is concerned. At a meeting of the passenger managers of the various lines, held in the office of Mr. Annable of the C. P. R. Atlantic lines, it was decided that the Government should be asked to better equip their quarantine stations, and in every way possible prepare for an outbreak which might occur.

No steamship man looks for cholera to visit Canada or the ships in the North Atlantic trade, but in times of peace we have to prepare for war," the Manager of one of the transatlantic lines said on Wednesday.

The Thomson Line, with their Mediterranean service, are interested in the progress of the plague now raging in Naples, for, while none of their ships dock at Naples, the trouble is so general that they do not know at what time their trade may be interfered with. The Thomson people have several ships to come from Mediterranean ports during the next month or two, but their business is chiefly freight-carrying.

SEPTEMBER FRUIT REPORT

Crop of Apples Generally Uneven--Good Results of Spraying.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The report of the Fruit Division of the Department of Agriculture for September says that the quality of the apple crop, speaking generally, is very uneven, due probably to the difference in the treatment of the orchards. In most cases where the trees have been properly looked after, a good crop of clean fruit is the result. Early apples were light in southern Ontario, with Fall apples better and the Winter varieties scarce. The orchards of the Norfolk Fruit Growers' Association are an exception, as, having been well cultivated and sprayed for years, they have a medium to full crop. Western Ontario is almost without Winter apples, the north shore of Lake Ontario and the Georgian Bay district has a light to medium crop, while in eastern Ontario the crop will be very light. New Brunswick has not enough apples for home consumption, and in the Annapolis Valley the crop is light and the quality poor. Prince Edward Island has the poorest crop in years, even the crab apples being almost a failure.

HUNDREDS PERISH BY FIRE

Calamity That Reaches the Proportions of an International Disaster.

A despatch from Rainy River, Ont., says: The most disastrous forest fires in the history of Northern Minnesota and Western Ontario have been ravaging the country the past three days. The towns of Spooner and Beaudette, on the American side are heaps of ashes. When Spooner and Beaudette caught fire the Canadian Northern Railway rushed a train of fifty box cars to help the residents get away. They were brought to this place on Saturday night. The flames were raging fiercely through the timber and already millions of dollars of damage has been done. The Shevelin-Matthews Lumber Co. lost all their buildings and 150,000,000 feet of lumber. The Rat Portage Lumber Co. also lost all their plant with 60,000,000 feet.

The Rainy River Co. suffered the same fate and lost 35,000,000 feet of lumber. There are 1,000 people homeless here. The villages of Slemons, Pitt, Williams and Swift have also been destroyed.

While a wind is sweeping a sea of fire eastward on the south side of the Rainy River at a velocity of 50 miles an hour, the great body of flames passed this section, revealing a calamity that already reaches the proportion of an international disaster. Sixty blackened corpses have been found in the path of the flames and a vast area is yet to be searched for dead, while the towns of Spooner, Beaudette and Pitt have been totally destroyed, with a property loss that cannot be intelligently calculated at present. With the exception of the destruction of the mills and stock of the Rat Portage Lumber Co. near Rainy River, following the course of the flames which touched a corner of the town, the principal loss is confined to the south side of the river and chiefly sustained along the American border.

Railroad and wire connection with the scene of the great disaster in the West is cut off by a burned district from Warroad, Minn., on the Canadian Northern Railroad, a distance of forty miles, through which the last trains passed on Saturday night at imminent peril of the lives of the crew. The road is open to the south and east, however, and relief is being afforded from Fort William. Those fires have been smouldering in that district for months, and were started anew by the terrific wind which began to blow two days ago. The wind increased in velocity with the heat until a wave of flame over a hundred feet high, and as long, leaped barriers half a mile wide in many directions. It was this situation that caused so many to perish on the railway track. They sought this opening in the bush, but were burned to cinders by the heat wave leaping this barrier of some three hundred yards along the clearing of the railway tracks.

A special despatch from Warroad, Minn., says: The fire zone covers an area 65 miles long and 30 miles wide. It stretches along the international boundary and the Canadian Northern Railway from Gravel Pit Spur, west on Warroad, to Stratton, the fourth station east of Rainy River. Another despatch tells that over seventy bodies have been found, while the number of dead will probably reach three hundred.

THE SECRET OF HER POWER; Or, A TRUTH NEVER OLD.

"I know; the one is opportunism; the other Optimism."

"Perhaps," says Blanford, with a smile, and thinks meantime, "she knows something about him. What is it?"

Does she know Gervase, despite her denial? he wonders. He has an impression that she does. There was a look of recognition in her eyes when she gave that vague, bland gesture in answer to her host. All trifles in her interest him, as they always do interest a man in a woman whom he admires and is not sure that he understands; and Gervase, he is aware, has been a good deal in Russia.

He himself has known the subject of their discourse ever since they were boys, and had that sort of intimacy with him which exists between men who live in the same sets and belong to the same clubs. But to him Gervase seems a petit maitre, a poseur, a man artificial, conventional, ambitious in small things; and to Gervase he himself seems as much as he does to Lady Usk, a perverse and lawless Bohemian, only saved from the outer darkness by the fact of his aristocratic birth.

Meanwhile, in her own room, Xenia Sabaroff is pursuing her own reflections while her maid disrobes her.

"It will be better to see him once and for all," she muses. "I cannot go on forever avoiding him in every city in Europe. Very likely he will not even remember my face or my name."

A haughty flush passes over her face at her own reflections. After all, to have any emotion at all about it, pleasurable or painful, is humiliating. She is a proud woman, as well as a courageous one. There are memories associated with this coming guest which are bitter and hateful.

Every one is indoors that day, for a summer rain is falling without, and has been falling since noon. All the house party are in the library, and the children are there also; the windows are open, and the sweet smell from the damp gardens and wet grass fills the air.

Every one is laughing and talking; Usk is drinking a glass of kummel, and Blanford is playing with the dog; conversing with Nina Curzon and the mistress of the house, and standing in front of them, is a tall, fair man, irreproachable in tenue and extremely distinguished in appearance. He is Lord Gervase. His back is toward the door, and he does not see or hear her enter, but as the Babe rushes toward her, tripping over a stool and treading mercilessly on the trains of tea-gowns in the wind of his going, the noise made by the child makes him turn his head, and an expression of recognition, mingled with amazement, passes over his usually impassive features.

"Is that not Princess Sabaroff?" he asks of his hostess, with a certain breathless astonishment betrayed in his voice.

Lady Usk assents. "One of my dearest friends," she adds. "I don't think you don't know her? I will present you in a moment. She is as clever as she is beautiful. The children adore her. Look at Babe."

The Babe has dragged his princess to a couch and climbed up on it himself, kneeling half on her lap and half on it, with no respect for the maize satin, while his impatient little feet beat the devil's tattoo among the point d'Alencon.

"My dear Babe, do not be such a monopolist," said Blanford, as he approaches with a cup of tea and a wafer of caviare bread and butter. "Your shoes have seventeenth century buckles to be wrapped up in a lady's dress."

The Babe grins saucily, tossing his hair out of his eyes; but with unwonted obedience he disentangles his feet with some care out of the lace.

Xenia Sabaroff does not take as much notice of him as usual. She is reserved and preoccupied. Blanford, like the child, fails in awakening her interest or attention. She has seated herself almost with her back to where Gervase is standing, but every now and then she looks half round as by an irresistible, unconscious impulse of curiosity.

Blanford notes the gesture, as her actions have an interest for him which grows daily in its fascination. There is Dorothy Usk's phoenix; he says to her in a low tone when the Babe has scampered off after bon-bone—he indicates Gervase with a glance. Her eyebrows contract slightly as if in some displeasure or constraint.

"Lady Usk is very soon satisfied," she replies coldly. "Her own amiability makes her see perfection everywhere."

"It is a quality we cannot value too highly in so imperfect a world. It is better than seeing everything on noir, surely?" says Blanford. "If we make people what we think them, as optimists say, it is best to be optimistic."

"I dislike optimism," she says, curtly. "It is absurd and untrue. Our Dostoevsky is a wiser novelist than your Dickens. One must believe something," she says.

"It is pretty for a woman to think," says Blanford, "but myself I have never seen why. I may hope, I may wish, I may regret, I may—if I am very sanguine—even expect; but believe—no!"

"Perhaps I should like to believe in a woman," he adds, more softly, with that infection of his voice which has always had at all events the effect of making women believe in him.

Mme. Sabaroff is not so easily touched as many. She pauses a moment, then says, with a certain weariness, "Anybody who can believe can love; that is nothing new."

"What would be new? To love and disbelieve in what we love? It would be very painful."

"It would be a test," says his companion.

Gervase meanwhile has sunk into a chair by the side of Nina Curzon and is saying in a whisper, "Who is that lady? The one with her back to us, to whom Lord Blanford is so attentive? I thought I knew all the Usk's people."

"Look in your Russian memories, and you will probably find that you know her, too," replies Mrs. Curzon.

"Oh, she is a Russian?" says Gervase, then adds, negligently, "I think, now you tell me that, I have seen her before. Is she not the Princess Sabaroff?"

"Why did you pretend not to know her?" thinks Nina Curzon as the answers: "Yes, that is her name. You must have met her in Petersburg."

"Petersburg is very dim in my memories," he replies, evasively. "It's baccharat is what made the deepest impression on my remembrance and my fortunes. Now I think of it, however, I recollect her quite well; her husband was Anatole Sabaroff, and Leitnitz shot him in a duel about her. Am I right?"

"So charming for her," says Nina Curzon; "English women never have anything happen for them picturesque like that; our men always die of indigestion, or going after a fox."

"It is very curious."

"What is? Dyspepsia? Hunting?"

"How one comes across people."

"After long years," quotes Mrs. Curzon, with mock romance in her tones. "Generally, I think," she adds with a little yawn, "we can never get rid of our people, the world is so small, and there is really only one set in it that is decent, so we can't ever get out of it. It must have been very nice in Romeo and Juliet's days when a little drive to Mantua took you into realms wholly inaccessible to your Verona acquaintance. Nowadays, if you run away from anybody in London, you are sure to run against them in Yvelde or Yucatan."

"Constancy made easy, like the three R's," says Gervase. "Unfortunately, despite our improved facilities, we are not so constant."

"He means to imply that he threw over the Sabaroff," thinks Mrs. Curzon, "but he is such a boaster of his bonnes fortunes that one can never know whether he is lying."

"Pray let me make you known to Madame Sabaroff," says Lady Usk to him a little later. "She is such a very dear friend of mine, and I see you have been looking at her ever since she entered the room."

"She is a very handsome person; any one would look at her," replies her cousin. "Were he not so perfectly well bred and impassive, it might almost be said that the suggested presentation fills him with some vague nervousness."

Nina Curzon wishes him inquisitively as he is led up and presented to Mme. Sabaroff.

"I think I have had the honor before now, in Petersburg," murmurs Gervase. She looks at him very coldly.

"I think not," she replies; the words are of the simplest, but c'est le ton qui fait la musique, and for the solitary time in his existence Lord Gervase is embarrassed.

Blanford, playing with the colley dog near at hand, listens and observes.

Lady Usk is not so observant. "It is a long time since he was in Russia," she says to her friend; "I dare say you have forgotten; his father was alive and his name was Baird then, you know."

Xenia Sabaroff makes a little polite gesture expressive of entire indifference to the change in these titles. With an action which would be rude in any woman less high bred, she turns away her head and speaks to Blanford, ignoring the acquaintance and the presence of Gervase.

"A snub direct!" whispers Lawrence Hamilton to Mr. Wootton.

"Or a cut direct—which?" says that far-sighted gentleman.

"Anyhow, it's delightful to see him let in for it," reflects Usk, who has also observed the incident from where he stands by the liquors.

"Mme. Sabaroff is eclipsing the black woman," says that lady.

"What black woman?" asks Gervase, very inattentive and bored. She tells him the story of the Hindoo harem and he hears no word of it.

Blanford is always so odd," he says, indifferently, watching the hand of Xenia Sabaroff as it rests on the shoulder of the Babe, who is leaning against her knees gazing at her adoringly.

"Seven years," he thinks. "Good heavens, what an eternity! And she is handsomer than she was then; very handsome, wonderfully handsome."

He looks at her all the while from under his half-closed eyelids, while he talks he knows not what kind of rubbish to Lady Dawlish.

Xenia Sabaroff does not once look his way. The moment which she had dreaded passed, and it has made no impression whatever upon her; her indifference reconciles her to herself. Is it possible, she wonders, that she ever loved or ever thought that she loved, this man?

"Why, will you always treat me as a stranger, Mme. Sabaroff?" murmurs Gervase to her that night when for a moment he is alone near her, while the cotillion overture commences.

"You are a stranger—to me," replies Xenia Sabaroff, and as she speaks she looks full at him.

He colors with discomfiture. "Because in the due course of nature I have succeeded to my father's title you seem to consider that I have changed my whole identity," he says, with great irritation.

She is silent; she looks down on the white ostrich feathers of her fan. He is vaguely encouraged by that silence. "Strangers! That is surely a very cold and cruel word between those who once were friends!"

The direct appeal to her makes her look up once more with great hauteur in the coldness of her face. "Sir, I think when people have forgotten that each other exist it is as though they had never met. They are perhaps something more distant still than strangers, for, to strangers, friendship in the future is possible; but those who have been separated by oblivion on the one hand and by contempt on the other are parted as surely and eternally as though death had divided them."

Gervase gathers some solace from the very strength of the words. She would not, he thinks, feel so strongly unless she felt more than he allows; he gazes at her with feigned humility and unfeigned admiration and regret.

"If Mme. Sabaroff," he murmurs, "can doubt her own powers of compelling remembrance she is the one person on earth only who can do so."

She is stung to anger.

"I am really at a loss to decide whether you are intentionally insolent or unintentionally insincere. You are possibly both."

"I am neither! I am only a man who passionately and uselessly rebels against his fate."

"Who regrets his own actions, you mean to say. That is nothing uncommon."

"Well, who regrets the past, if you will put it so, and who would atone for it would you allow him?" (Atoner!) Do you suppose that you owe me reparation? It is I who owe you thanks for a momentary oblivion which did me immeasurable service."

"That is a very harsh doctrine. The Princess Xenia whom I knew was neither so stern nor so skeptical."

"The Princess Xenia, who you know was a child, a foolish child; she is dead, quite as much dead as though she were under so many solid square feet of Baltic ice. Put her from your thoughts; you will never awake her."

Then she rises and leaves him and goes out of the ball room.

Throughout that evening he does not venture to approach her again, and he endeavors to throw himself with some show of warmth into a flirtation with Nina Curzon.

"Why do you pretend not to know her?" says Mrs. Curzon to him.

He smiles the fatuous smile with which a man ingeniously expresses what he would be thought a brute to put into words.

"She does not deign to know me now," he says, modestly, and to the experienced comprehension of Nina Curzon the words, although so modest, tell her as much as the loudest boast could do.

MILKING MAKES MILKERS.

In recent years the demand for cows of the special dairy breeds has so increased that breeders have not been able to fully meet the demand. This is bringing about a condition which is not good for the future of these breeds. Many breeders are not keeping records of their individual cows. They can not give the production records of the dams and grand-dams of the animals they are offering for sale unless there be in the pedigree some cow which has made a fine record. In some cases it is even whispered that the cows are not milked for any length of time, but are permitted to suckle their calves. We would hesitate to believe that real breeders would adopt such a suicidal practice, but it is probably followed by speculators who have been attracted by a stiff demand and high prices. But it is undoubtedly true that the milking qualities of many special-purpose dairy herds are being neglected at the present time.

The admirers of the special purpose dairy cow should not fall into a sense of security because of past records and present demand. The dairy cow has made her way by performance at the pail. She produces the milk. But she will not go on producing milk unless she is milked. The best dairy herd in the world can be ruined in a very few years by letting the calves run with the cows. Milk makes milkers. Breeding from the best produces a better. The scales and the Babcock test determine the value of the cow. There are more good dairy cows in the special dairy herds than anywhere else, simply because they have been milked and have been bred and fed for milk. Let the breeders stop milking or stop keeping records and the value of their cattle for the dairy will rapidly decline. The sure fact that the cow is a Jersey, or Holstein, or Guernsey, or Ayrshire, does not mean that she is always a profitable cow. She is much more likely to be than if she is Hereford, or Angus, or Shorthorn. But there are thousands of dairy-bred cows that are not worth their keep, and there will be thousands more in a very short time if the dairy breeders do not milk and test and eliminate the poor ones and breed from the best.—Wallace's Farmer.

FARM NOTES.

A garden hoe-plow will prevent backache and do three times as much work as the common hoe.

In saving potatoes for seed keep only those that are perfect in form. Take none from poor hills.

Much valuable manure is lost in poorly arranged stables, where it is impossible to save or recover the liquids.

Almost any one can make a bee hive but the best ones are factory made and may be had from any reliable supply house.

The depth of a tile drain should be between three and four feet, depending upon the character of the soil and the land to be drained.

Fruit culture cannot be carried on successfully without bees to effect fertilization through carrying pollen from one blossom to another.

Experiments have been carried on on a considerable scale in treating dandelions with chemicals, but as yet the results are not satisfactory.

The farmer who remembers the past winter and how he longed for silage to help out the high-priced feed will be a silo builder this year. The bee's business end strikes every one forcibly. No product now wasted can be more easily saved than nectar which bees work up into honey.

All bee keepers know that the bees of a queenless colony are quite liable to be irritable when handled, and are greatly inclined to follow the operator about the apiary and annoy him.

HOW HE DID IT.

A lawyer once asked a man who had at various times sat on several juries: "Who influenced you most—the lawyers, the witnesses, or the judge?" He expected to get some useful and interesting information from so experienced a jurymen. This was the man's reply:

"I'll tell you, sir, I own I makes up my mind. I'm a plain man, and a reasonin' man, and I ain't influenced by anything the lawyers says; no, nor by what the Judge says. I just looks at the man in the docks and I says: 'If he ain't done nothing, why is he there?' And I brings 'em all in guilty."

ARSENIC POISONING.

The Torture That Ensues Before Death Brings Relief.

When a single dose of arsenic is sufficient quantity to be felt has been taken colicky pains, bowel disorder and perhaps nausea result. In the course of an hour after a poisonous dose has been taken an intense burning pain is felt in the esophagus and stomach. This spreads to the entire anterior portion of the lower part of the trunk. A sense of constriction at the throat and an acrid, metallic taste accompany the pain. Then vomiting and relaxation of the bowels begin. As the case progresses the symptoms increase in intensity. Then comes a thirst that water will not allay, although it apparently increases the stomach disturbance. The victim groans and writhes.

Now he implores the doctor to save him. Then he begs to be killed and put out of pain. The extremities become icy. The pulse is small, feeble and frequent, and the breathing is labored, embarrassed and painful because of abdominal tenderness. The surface of the body becomes dark and of that bluish color that medical men call cyanosed. Violent cramps add their torture, exhaustion becomes collapse, convulsions or coma ensues, and death ends the agony. The torture lasts sometimes from five to twenty hours.

In some cases these symptoms occur, but in a modified form, and the doctor will apparently get the better of the disease. The remission will be but for a day or two. Then the abdomen will swell, and icy coldness will pervade the frame. Shivering will become pronounced trembling, then cramps, convulsions and death.

Great Scheme.

"What do you do," asked the one who had been married only a few months, "when your husband comes home late at night?"

"I pretend not to notice that it's late, and pretty soon he asks me if I wouldn't like to go to the theatre, or 'somewhere tomorrow afternoon.'"

Startling Encouragement.

"Was Amelia's father encouraging when you went to him to ask him for her hand?"

"Not very. He asked me to put the proposal in writing, so I couldn't back out, as all the others did."

Which is Your Choice?

Sloppy, leaky wooden troughs, or clean, durable Concrete?

Wooden drinking troughs are about as reliable as the weather.

They are short-lived and require replacing every few years—not to mention continual patching to keep them in repair.

The best of wood cannot withstand, for long, constant dampness and soaking. Its tendency to rapid decay soon shows itself in leaks and stagnant pools of water around trough.

Contrast with this the durability, cleanliness and well-ordered appearance of Concrete.

Tax Reform

At the last session of the Ontario Legislature over two hundred and seventy municipalities including Ottawa, Toronto and five other cities, petitioned to have the Assessment Act amended so that municipalities may tax improvements at a lower rate than land values; business assessments and salaries to be classed with improvement values.

When this amendment came up at last Session it was withdrawn on request of the Premier, who was not convinced there was sufficient public demand for it. Since then Vancouver, B. C., which had been experimentally lowering its assessment on improvements for some years past, decided to remove all taxation from buildings and other improvements; and to raise its revenue from a tax on land values only. Mayor Taylor reports that largely in consequence of this progressive step, building operations are much greater this year than any previous year of its history, and it naturally follows that the increased distribution of wages through the building trade has brought prosperity in an unprecedented degree to all lines of business.

We believe every municipality in Ontario would benefit in a most marked degree by following Vancouver's example by gradually reducing taxation on improvements to the vanishing point, and raising their revenues from a tax on land values only, as is done in many other parts of the world. The Ontario Assessment Act, however, will have to be changed as outlined in the Frapp Bill. This bill provides for the adoption of the change by a municipality only on a majority vote of the property owners, so that no municipality need adopt it unless the property owners wish to do so.

Petitions are again being forwarded from very many municipalities, and it is altogether likely that a much larger number will be presented to the Legislature at its coming session than at the last. All the leading newspapers have endorsed the proposed change and petitions have already been received from over 200 labor unions. The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada at its recent session at Port Arthur, cordially endorsed the amendment and urged its Unions in all the Provinces to work for its adoption in their own Province, as well as Ontario. Besides these thousands of individuals have petitioned to the same effect.

Bank Accounts vs. Investments

"Some of my neighbors think that I am not worth much; they expect to hear of me making an assignment almost any day." Such were the words of a prominent pure bred dairy cattle breeder while in conversation recently with an editor of Farm and Dairy. "The trouble with me as they see it," he continued is that I haven't got a large bank account. In fact, I sometimes haven't a cent in the bank. A farmer is not supposed to be prosperous in our township until he has two or three thousand dollars in the bank. I have a few thousand invested in my herd and farm and every dollar of it is making me eight to ten per cent. It is a poor farm that will not pay more than bank interest on an investment.

"One of our neighbors has $10,000 in the bank. He is considered by all to be the wealthiest man in the section. He and his wife live alone. His one object in life is to add a few more dollars to that precious account. His sons all left for town as soon as they were big enough to get away. The man is absolutely useless to the community in which he lives, and his life is simply a round of idleness."

"And even with that large bank account I should consider his life a failure from a purely business point of view. In the 20 or more years that he has been struggling after that $10,000 he has never taken more than a bare living and never considers such a thing as interest on the investment he has in his farm. Had he and his wife lived as well-to-do farmers should live, and had he to pay for the money invested in his farm at five per cent, he would to-day be a few thousand dollars in debt."

"Fourteen years ago I started in to farm with $1,000 cash. All of this I invested in four pure-bred cows which had been bred to a good bull. These cows were the foundation of my present herd. I have always lived well and aimed to be of some use to the community in which I live, but every cent other than this has gone into my herd. And the herd has paid for the farm. I don't suppose I have more than a couple of hundred dollars where I could get hold of it on a day's notice, but I think that I am worth at least $12,000 more than I was 14 years ago and have had a good time as well."

"A man's bank account," our friend concluded, "is a poor criterion of his wealth, even in dollars and cents. If it is large it is a sure indication of poor business ability."—Farm and Dairy.

A convict in the Kingston Penitentiary named William Huckle claims to be the author of Hymn No. 676 in the Anglican Book of Praise, "Just for the Day," and states that he wrote it in 1879. He has submitted proofs to that effect, to the Archbishop of Ottawa.

Mr. E. Gus Porter, C. C., states that he will institute an appeal against the conviction of Robert Parker, sentenced to death for the killing of his neighbor, William Masters, on the grounds explained to the jury on Saturday morning, and on the additional grounds of the exclusion of the two letters which he attempted to submit as evidence in the recent trial. "Failing that," said Mr. Porter, "I will make an appeal to the Governor-General for clemency."

Rawdon Council

RAWDON TOWN HALL, OCT. 13, 1910.

The regular meeting of Rawdon Council was held on above date. Members all present. Minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

Mr. Joseph Green made application for the Council to pass a By-law to prohibit animals from running at large. No action taken. He also applied to have a ditch opened opposite lot 21 and 22 in the first concession. No action taken. He then presented an account of $10.00 damages on account of road not being properly drained. Account not entered.

Miss Samuel Davis applied for an approach to be built in front of her residence. The Council agreed to meet Saturday, October 8th, 1910, at 1 o'clock p. m., to investigate.

Mr. David McLean made application to have a ditch cleaned opposite lot 28 in the 3rd concession. The Council agreed to investigate.

Mr. Geo. Snarr reported how he thought best to repair the Town Hall, and Mr. Jas. Drewry agreed to repair the same by pointing the outside, building a cement platform out to the fence 12 ft. long, putting in a cement door sill, clean and patch the ceiling, lath, strap and plaster side walls, repair floor, fix window casings, put in new windows with large glass and paint both inside and out for $205.00. The Council decided to have the Hall repaired and gave Mr. Drewry the job.

Correspondence was read and filed. Mr. Donald Bell presented his account for $242.44 for building cement side walks from gravel road to C.O.R. Junction. In accordance with petition signed by the rate payers of that road, the Council decided to set aside Commutation Statute Labor for Road Division the sum of 40.00 per year until paid.

Correspondence was read from the Seymour Power and Electric Co., enclosing cheques for five hundred and twenty-five dollars for trees cut on roads in the township, which was accepted.

Moved by Mr. Cooke seconded by Mr. Jeffs, that the rules be suspended for the purpose of passing a By-law assuming the Spry Settlement road as a township improved road.

Mr. Cooke introduced a By-law to assume the Spry Settlement road as a township improved road.

Moved by Mr. Cooke seconded by Mr. Jeffs, that the Council go into a committee of the whole on By-laws, Mr. Montgomery in the chair.

Carried. By-law was then read clause by clause.

The English language has made another conquest. China has made the study of English compulsory in her high schools. The Regent of China recently issued an Imperial edict ordering the adoption of English as the one foreign language to be studied in every scientific, technical and high school of the empire, which is a command that every educated Chinese must familiarize himself with our language.

They have a policeman in Los Angeles. Her duties are limited to caring for girls. Such an officer appearing her duties and diligent performing them, can do valuable service in a community. There are many duties which the parent neglects—this is one of them, looking after the thoughtless and foolish girls, keeping them from bad places and stopping their loud conduct on the street. There is another duty that demands official attention, and that is the protection of girls and women from the remarks of loafers along the streets. Who has not seen decent, respectable girls going quietly along the street insulted by some impertinent remark? The policeman could swear out a warrant and have such a fellow arrested. A case of this kind now and then would break up the dirty business. Of course, a cowardly promptly administered to those lascivious, leering loafers would be a good way, but in lieu of that, this would answer.

Bill Lange's Long Hit. In an article on "Battling" in the American Magazine Hugh S. Fuller describes as follows the longest hit ever recorded: "Lange, who was of the middle ages of the game, made a hit in Cincinnati which is regarded by many as the longest hit ever made. The ball cleared the center field fence, which was on top of a high embankment, sailed across Western avenue, went through the window of a saloon and was found behind the bar. The hit made a fortune for the saloon, as big crowds went to see the ball on exhibition."

Domestic Economy. "My wife threatened I didn't get her a new hat she'd go home to her mother."

"Why didn't you let her?" "Her railroad fare would cost more than the hat."—Boston Transcript.

THE KING'S WATCH.

A Napoleonic Gift That Embarrassed Jerome Bonaparte.

Previous to his elevation to the sovereignty Jerome Bonaparte had formed a friendship with some young authors at that time in vogue for their wit and reckless gaiety. On the evening after his nomination to the crown of Westphalia he met two of his jovial companions just as he was leaving the theater. "My dear fellows," said he, "I am delighted to see you. I suppose you know that I have been created king of Westphalia?" "Yes, sire, and permit us to be among the first!" "Oh, what? You are ceremonious, methinks. That might pass were I surrounded by my court, but at present away with form and let us be off to supper."

Upon this Jerome took his friends to one of the best restaurants in the Palais Royal. The three chatted and laughed and said and did a thousand of those foolish things which, when unpremeditated are so delightful. It may be supposed that the conversation was not kept up without drinking. When the wine they had drunk began to take effect, "My good friends," said Jerome, "why should we quit each other? If you approve of my proposal you shall accompany me. You, C., shall be my secretary. As for you, P., who are fond of books, I appoint you my librarian." The arrangement was accepted and ratified over a fresh bottle of champagne.

At length the party began to think of leaving and accordingly called for the bill. Jerome produced his purse, but the king of Westphalia could only find 2 louis, which formed but a small portion of 200 francs, the amount of the bill. The new dignitaries by clubbing their wealth could only muster about 8 francs.

What was to be done? At 1 o'clock in the morning where could resources be found? They determined to send for the master of the house and acquaint him how matters stood. He seemed to take the frolic in good part and merely requested to know their names. Having told him, the restaurateur set his customers down as sharpers and threatened to send for the commissary of police. This alarmed Jerome, who, seeing that the restaurateur doubted them, handed over his watch in payment. This watch had been a present from Napoleon, and on the back was the emperor's cipher in brilliants.

On examining the watch the restaurateur concluded that it had been stolen and took it to the commissary of police. The latter, recognizing the imperial cipher, ran with it to the prefect. The prefect flew to the minister of the interior, and he in turn went to the emperor at St. Cloud. Next morning the Minister contained an ordinance in which Jerome was ordered to Westphalia at once and prohibited from conferring any appointments till his arrival at his capital.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

MIND YOUR TEETH.

The Value of Keeping the Mouth and Gums Perfectly Clean.

A man is known by the teeth he keeps. The worst thing that can happen to our teeth is for them not to have enough to do. It is the worst thing that can happen to us also. Spiritualized and cultured as we have become, we still fight the battle of life with our teeth, though we no longer chew our enemies' ears or throats. Bone cored, enamel coated and rock ribbed as the hills, our teeth are more absolutely under our control than almost any other structure of the body. Neglect them and they decay at once. Give them proper attention and they will go on repairing themselves for forty, fifty, sixty years.

Give children plenty of roughening food to chew, and they will get the pearly vigor of the savage tooth with the endurance of the Caucasians. Above all, the food should be of such a character as to give exercise and massage to the gums. Part of this can be given by plenty of coarse food in addition to real food—not as a substitute for it—and part by intentional and vigorous friction with the toothbrush. To brush the gums well is half the value of brushing the teeth.

Keep the mouth and gums strictly clean, and the teeth will take care of themselves. There are thirty-three distinct named and labeled sorts of bacilli or bugs in our mouths as normal parlor boarders, but they'll behave with perfect propriety unless you give them carriage to get drunk on.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Survey.

Of Special Interest

It is but right and proper that women who live on farms should have interests especially looked after.
That is why there is published this week a special enlarged magazine Household Number of Farm and Dairy;
it is also the reason why each week
this great national farm and dairy paper devotes considerable space to matters especially interesting and helpful to women who live in rural sections.
Subscribers have been writing in that they are looking forward with pleasure to reading the Household Number of Farm and Dairy, which they will get this week at no extra cost to them. All the articles in the issue are written by women or are about women who live on farms. Many of the articles are illustrated with pictures of ladies who contributed them. The cover is in colors. The pages are profusely illustrated and the reading matter is full of interest and helpful suggestions.
The leading articles are contributed by Mrs. J. Muldrew, Macdonald College, Que.; Miss Laura Rose Guelph; Dr.
Annie Backus, Almyer, and Miss Marion Dallas, Ottawa. Besides these, there is a host of other contributors who write upon most practical subjects in which they give their own experience in a most helpful and interesting way.
A perusal of this Household Number will surprise one to learn how much some women are accomplishing in farm life.

Would you like to have a copy of this special Household Number? You may have one free if you will write Farm and Dairy, Peterboro, enclosing a two-cent stamp to cover postage.
This paper has completed arrangements with Farm and Dairy whereby we will all magazine numbers (40 in all) and several illustrated supplements of Farm and Dairy may be had by new subscribers from now until the end of this year and all of next year up till January 1st,

Bancroft Times—Friday last was a very busy day for police Magistrate Jarman. Three convictions were made for violations of the Milk, Cheese and Butter Act and $100 in fines collected, and for illegal killing of deer, moose and partridge the fines amounted to $250. This should serve as a warning to parties who have been shooting game indiscriminately. We are withholding their names this time, but the next offenders will get a little free

The Indians and old-timers of the Northwest say that the coming winter will be one of the coldest on record.
They point to the fact that the fur-bearing animals are growing thicker and longer coats than customary, that muskrats are building their houses larger and higher than in their custom in mild winters, that the bears are starting to make their dens in the most protected places they can find, and the little chipmunks and gophers are also preparing for a siege. They say that these signs never fail.

enced by all who use Chamberlain's alone of from $800 to $1000 per year.

House last evening will long be remembered in Stirling as a company of delightful entertainers. They are all artists of marked ability, and their orchestra selections are particularly worthy of mention. Great skill was shown in the clever handling of the different instruments, many of which were entirely new and strange to the audience.
The Peak Sisters were greeted by a great many of their friends in town and vicinity and are to be congratulated on the success of their first visit to

A special meeting of the Village Council was held at the Council Chamber on Tuesday morning, Oct.
11th. A letter was read from Dr. H.
H. Alger tendering his resignation as Chief of the fire brigade. On motion the resignation was accepted. It was thought best to have a meeting of the fire brigade and business men of the village before appointing a new Chief and accordingly it was arranged to notify all possible and have a meeting in the Town Hall the same evening.

Another special meeting of the Council was held on Wednesday morning, when the appointment of the officers of the fire Company made at the meeting the previous evening was ratified, and in addition, Mr. E. A. Sprentall was re-appointed chief engineer, and Messrs.
S. Hoad, Jas. Conley and S. Nolan assistant engineers, all the officers to enter upon their duties forthwith.

Public Meeting

The public meeting in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening was largely attended by the business men and members of the fire brigade and others. The meeting was hurriedly called to take into consideration matters in connection with the resignation of the Chief, Dr. Alger.

On motion Mr. W. S. Martin was appointed chairman, and after stating that he had the day previous received notice of a reduction in insurance rates, and the importance of keeping the fire company efficiently organized, Mr. Mather was called upon, who stated the fire company was now without a Chief owing to the resignation of Dr. Alger, and though the Council had the right to appoint a chief, they thought it better to call a meeting of the business men and the fire company and consult their wishes in the matter. A number in the audience wanted an explanation of the reasons for Dr. Alger's resignation and Mr.
Coulter gave a full explanation, after which a number of new names were enrolled as members of the fire company and on motion Mr. Jas. Lagrow, formerly Assistant Chief was named as the new Chief, Mr. D. A. Burkitt, Assistant Chief and Mr. W. U.
Grain as Captain. Each of the new officers spoke briefly thanking the members of the company for their election, and promising to do all in their power to maintain the efficiency of the fire department.

Dr. Potts then made a short address in reference to the proposed expenditure for an addition to the High School, and thought the people should have the privilege of having a say in the matter.

Mr. Mather spoke in reply; and Mr.
Coulter promised that a public meeting would be held for a discussion of the question.

The meeting then adjourned.

The Bancroft Fair was a great success according to the Times. It says:
"Never in the history of the society were the entries so numerous or from so wide a range of territory, and so far we have heard very few complaints from exhibitors. There are, however, two things that will have to be done next year—a ring will have to be provided in which to judge the horses, and a permanent booth erected for dispensing meals and refreshments. The Fair of 1910 will be remembered for perfect weather, record-breaking entries, enormous crowds and excellent exhibits."

The trial of Robert Parker charged with the shooting of William Masters near Tweed on the 8th of April last, took place at Belleville last week and occupied the time of the Court for four days. There were a great number of witnesses, both for the prosecution and defence and the trial was not concluded until a late hour on Friday night.
The jury were out four hours and a half and did not find a verdict until 1.35 on Saturday morning. The finding of the jury was a verdict of "Guilty, with a strong recommendation for mercy." The judge then pronounced sentence, which was that he be hanged on the 3rd of December next.

Mr. Parker is an old man, upwards of seventy years, and it is altogether likely that the sentence will be comu-tated to imprisonment for life. The evidence against him was almost altogether of a circumstantial nature, and under the circumstances there is good grounds for clemency.

Canadian navy, which will arrive in Halifax from England next month, will, during the winter months, take a cruise in West Indian waters. It is understood that his Excellency Earl Grey will visit the West Indies on British papers. It has been stated in the West Indies may have a special significance and be considerably more than a mere pleasure trip. It is asserted that he has been commissioned by the Imperial Government to further inquire into the report on the possibilities of improving steamship communication between Canada and the West Indies, with a view to encouragcommended by the Royal Commission on trade between the British overseas dominions on this side of the Atlantic.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information
of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

ORIGINAL RECIPES.

Corn Salad.—This is a delicious and an original salad and one which will recommend itself once tried. One large head of cabbage, three onions, three red peppers, two dozen ears of sweet corn. Remove seeds from the peppers, chop the peppers, onions, and cabbage fine. Cut the corn from the cob and mix all together. Season with one-half cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of oil, one pint of vinegar, and one tablespoonful of celery salt. Add one cupful of water and mix together. To one cupful of French mustard (more can be used if desired), mix and blend with one-half cupful of water for a gravy thickening. When the mixture has boiling, add slowly (it should be stirred often) for thirty minutes, add thickening and boil ten minutes, then seal tightly.

Chocolate Biscuits with Jam.—Place two ounces of powdered sugar in a bowl with two egg yolks, a pinch of salt, half teaspoonful of vanilla extract; mix well for five minutes. Beat the whites of the two eggs to a stiff froth, add to the yolks with two ounces of flour, and mix lightly. Line a pastry pan with buttered paper. Drop in the preparation, neatly smooth the surface, sprinkle with a little powdered sugar, and set in a moderate oven for twenty minutes. Remove and allow to cool; turn the cake on a clean board, remove the paper, and spread with jam over the surface of the cake. Prepare a glaze of chocolate (as below), spread evenly over the jam, and let cool. Cut the cake into even pieces, place on a dish, set in the oven for a minute, remove, and serve.

BREADS.

Parker House Rolls.—This is a recipe for Parker House rolls, which was given in the domestic science department of one of the public schools: One pint of milk, one tablespoonful of lard, one-half cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one yeast cake, soak in extra milk, one and one-half quarts of flour. Scald the milk and add the lard and sugar. Remove from the fire and add salt. When lukewarm dissolve the yeast in it. Mix into a stiff dough. The dough for rolls can be softer than for bread. Roll to one-half inch in thickness, being careful not to press too hard on the rolling pin and brush lightly with melted butter. Cut with a biscuit cutter and fold over, brushing the tops also with melted butter. Bake about twenty minutes.

Easy Breadmaking.—Sift three quarts of flour into the bread raiser, make a hole in center, and crumble in one cake of compressed yeast. Add one tablespoonful each of salt, sugar, and shortening, wet with one quart of warm water, and mix thoroughly for fifteen minutes, kneading it right in the pan. When smooth dust with flour and cover. When light pinch off enough for each loaf and just mold well with the hands, put in greased pans, and let rise again, and bake as usual. This will make three loaves, plain, a pan of rolls, and a raisin loaf, which is a nice baking for a family of four. In winter use the same process, except to mix it up at night. In summer it only takes six hours, and your bread is out of the way without handling, except from raiser to baking pans.

GREEN PEPPERS.

Stuffed Peppers.—Make a stuffing of cooked rice, tomatoes, a little minced onion, and salt. Fill sweet peppers, after seeds have been removed, and bake until tender, basting frequently.

Pepper Puree.—Removes stem and seeds and chop fine a sufficient number of green peppers. Cook one-half hour in salted water. Drain, press through colander and repeat, with salt, butter and sweet cream.

Baked Peppers.—Put in bake dish alternate layers of cooked rice, sweet peppers and minced onion. Season, moisten with hot milk. Cover with dry bread crumbs and grated cheese thickly over top. Bake forty-five minutes.

Green Peppers with Eggs.—Par-boil five minutes six green peppers from which stems and seeds are removed. Drain and cut in fine strips. Chop onion and cook until done. Butter small ramkins and put a little of the mixture in and drop one egg in each. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake.

Stuffed Green Peppers.—Cut green peppers in half, scrape out the insides and let stand in boiling water for five minutes. Wipe dry and fill with the following mixture: Chopped lamb, beefsteak, or any cold meat you may have, cracker crumbs, and any left over vegetables—peas, corn, also, a little seasoning to taste, and milk to moisten. Place small pieces of butter on each pepper case and bake in moderate oven half an hour. Put a little water in bottom of pan and baste peppers every five minutes until done. This is a good way to use up left over meats and vegetables.

FROZEN DAINTIES.

Peanut Ice Cream.—Warm one quart and one pint of full milk (not skimmed) to about blood heat (not over), add a junket tablet, crushed and dissolved in a tablespoonful of cold water. Set aside for ten or fifteen minutes, then add one pound peanut candy (peanut brittle), crushed fine with a rolling pin. Freeze slowly.

Ginger Ice Cream.—Boil one and a half cup sugar with one-half cup of water and one level teaspoonful powdered ginger root (obtained from drug store) for about five minutes. Add a tablespoonful gelatin which has been dissolved in about a fourth cup of cold water and two tablespoonfuls lemon juice. One quart full milk and half a cup of candied ginger finely cut up, and a few walnut meats also cut up. Freeze.

Orange Cream.—Warm one quart full milk to about blood heat, add one-half cup sugar and one junket tablet, crushed and dissolved in a tablespoonful of cold water. Set aside for ten or fifteen minutes, while you are slightly warming one glass of orange marmalade. Add to the junket mixture and freeze. Orange marmalade made at home costs only about 6 cents per glass, and can be used in numerous ways besides as a "spread" for bread and toast.

CANNING RECIPES.

Corn Relish.—One dozen ears of corn, one cabbage, five medium sized onions, two green peppers (red). Chop pretty fine and add to these ingredients: One-half gallon of good vinegar, one box of mustard. Boil all thirty minutes. Just before taking off the fire add two tablespoonfuls of turmeric powder. This makes about four quarts.

Tomato Marmalade.—Pare and slice four quarts of ripe tomatoes, add four pounds of granulated sugar, six large lemons, and one cupful of seeded raisins. Put these in a kettle in layers and cook until quite thick. Pack in jars and cover with paraffin. This is a delicious relish.

LITTLE HELPS.

To clean white enameled woodwork use kerosene in warm water. The easiest way to clean carved picture frames is to use a small paint brush.

Kid slippers, belts, gloves and purses are best cleaned by rubbing them with French chalk.

Sponges are great germ collectors. They should be scalded out thoroughly every little while.

Never forget to dust over the door and window frames when giving a room its thorough weekly cleaning.

Have as nice towels as you can afford, but pay less attention to the quality than to their cleanliness.

When washing out glass add a little ammonia to the suds. This gives a brightness to the glass that nothing else can.

Use only light brown or white paper to clean the iron on ironing day if the eyes have the least tendency to weakness.

To turn a hem on table linen, take out the needle of your sewing machine and run the linen through the narrowest hemmer.

To Wash White Silk.—After washing carefully in the usual way, add one tablespoonful of wood alcohol to the rinsing water. It will prevent white silk from becoming yellow. This is recommended by one who has had great success in laundering white silk garments in this way.

To set green, blue, lavender and pink colors in wash goods soak in alum water before washing, two ounces to a tub of water. Black, dark blue, and gray should be soaked in strong salted water.

Here is a sure remedy for the removal of the little ant pest: Remove papers from shelves, then wash them with hot water. Prepare some strong alum water and take a small paint brush and cover the shelves, cracks and corners a few times and you will soon be free from them.

To gather nicely on the sewing machine make the tension quite loose. Then pull the top thread taut, and then the lower one will not pull through, as is often the case when you draw it up. It also saves tying the two ends together.

To Adjust Shields.—Sew narrow tape about one inch in length on arm's eye where ends of shield would come. Also on under arm seam and sleeve seam where shield would touch. Take a stitch with coarse thread (about No. 10) at ends of shields; tie and leave ends about one inch in length. Also take stitch at shield to correspond with tape on seams. Slip one thread through tape, tie in bow knot, and shield is firmly attached. Easy to undo before laundering.

Pocket Help.—Lay goods right side up, with chalk mark line of pocket opening. Over this lay piece of goods for facing pocket, and over the facing lay pocket lining, wrong side up. Chalk line for pocket opening on lining. With the machine stitch either side of chalk mark, double stitching ends for firmness. Now cut a slit through the three thicknesses of cloth, between the two rows of stitching and turn lining and facing back through the opening thus made. Baste and stitch the lower side; baste upper side back upon goods and stitch facings to lining. Baste slit into place; stitch across upper side and across both ends. Fold lining to form flat pocket, stitch and press.

PRETTY DRY TOWN.

Not Much Water Since King Solomon Built His Famous Pools.

Jerusalem, to-day, with its 50,000 inhabitants, depends almost entirely on rain for its water supply, the rainfall averaging about twenty-seven inches a year. Water thus collected and stored is good as long as roofs and cisterns are kept clean. In the houses of the wealthy classes these cisterns are large enough to store an ample amount of water. With the poorest people the reverse is the case. Most of the cisterns of their houses are small, and the houses are often so overcrowded that frequently, long before the summer is over, the water has given out and a supply has to be purchased at high prices from neighboring cisterns.

Among the poorer Jewish settlers on the outskirts of Jerusalem few are able to own their own cisterns, and large ones are built, generally by charity funds, for a common water supply. In many cases they are filled with surface water, and the insanitary elements with which the water thus collected is impregnated are held responsible for a large percentage of the fever and other diseases prevalent toward the end of the dry season. This same condition of the water supply appears to prevail among all the poorer classes of the city. When there is a shortage of rain a critical state of affairs ensues, and at such times most insanitary water is used.

At various times since the days of King Solomon efforts have been made to secure a water supply on which the city could depend. About seven and one-half miles to the south, by a little west, of Jerusalem, on the carriage road to Hebron, are three enormous reservoirs, known as Solomon's pools. These were constructed in the bed of a valley, across which heavy walls were thrown and cemented, and are large enough to contain 3,000 gallons of water. They were filled during the rainy season with water from the surrounding hills, and this was augmented by the inflow of a small spring a little higher in the valley, known as the "sealed fountain," and some other small springs. From these pools there was a masonry aqueduct, said to have been the work of Solomon, which, winding around the hillsides, carried the water to the temple in Jerusalem. At one point this conduit went through a mountain by a tunnel.—Harper's Weekly.

ALEXANDRA'S SAD TASK.

Preparing to Return the Presents of Edward VII's Admirers.

Our late King, as is well known, enjoyed the personal friendship of a larger number of his subjects than any previous British Sovereign, and it was the custom of many so honored to offer his Majesty some small present each year on his birthday. Naturally, the gifts of November 9th of last year, the last King Edward was ever to acknowledge, are to-day possessed of far more than their intrinsic worth. The Queen Mother, ever thoughtful for others, conceived the charmingly sincere idea of returning each present to its donor, as a souvenir of her dead husband, and the touching work of collecting the nick-nacks together has been proceeding within the walls of Buckingham Palace. Her Majesty personally supervised the packing and despatching of the tragic tokens.

LIGHTNING EXPERIENCE.

A farmer in Lincolnshire, England, who, some time ago, lost a hand, and now wears a steel hook on his arm in its place, was caught in one of the recent severe storms. A terrific flash of lightning rendered him unconscious, and on coming to he felt severe pain in his maimed arm. Looking down, he saw that the hook had been straightened out and twisted, his coat sleeve and the leather sheath (which is fitted to the handless arm and to which the hook is fixed) were torn to ribbons, and the stump of the arm itself was severely damaged. He was otherwise uninjured, but the arm is completely paralyzed.

THE S. S. LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
OCT. 16.

Lesson III. The Last Judgment,
Matt. 25. 31-46. Golden Text, Matt. 25. 40.

VERSE 31. The Son of Man—What he did in his humiliation was done in humanity's stead, and what he claims in his glory he claims as humanity's Head. He is the "Race-Man."

All the angels with him—The doctrine of angels is full of comfort. Nothing is taught more explicitly than that there is a "family in heaven" as on earth, who are moved to joy by the penitence of the sinner, and are models in the performance of the Father's will (Matt. 6. 10). In connection with Christ's coming in judgment, they are represented as a kind of court surrounding the throne and giving majesty to the scene.

On the throne—We must do our best to rid our minds of the idea of a judicial seat which shines with material splendor. This is a picturesque way of setting forth the real triumph of Christ reigning as King and declaring judgment upon the deeds of all men of all time. However many seed may have been lost in the sowing, and however deeply entangled the roots of the good seed may have become in their fight for their life, the good is at last regnant, and the evil is to be expelled forever.

Shall come in his glory—There is no doubt that Christ has come already—after the resurrection at Pentecost, in the destruction of the Holy City—and that he comes still. But a moral view of the universe demands a personal return of Christ in judgment, for the consummation of his kingdom; the establishment of righteousness, and the casting out of wrong. This will be his true glory.

32. All the nations—This is a disputed point, upon whose meaning depends the interpretation of what follows. It is significant that the "end" has come, and that therefore the gospel of the kingdom has been preached in the whole world for a testimony to all the nations (Matt. 24. 14). This does not necessarily mean that all have heard the name of Christ, but it does mean that all have had the opportunity to know their obligations to their fellows, and in this account this is the decisive test. We have here, therefore, a description of universal judgment.

He shall separate... the sheep from the goats—The latter bear a bad character in most legendary tales. This seems to be due to their color, they being covered with long jet-black hair, and to their habits. Their browsing upon tender twigs and shrubs works great mischief. They pasture with the sheep, but there is no intimacy, and when they are folded at night both seek their own kind. Sheep, being for the most part white and harmless, represent people of good character. Similar separations into two classes are common in Matthew (compare wheat and chaff, wise and foolish builders, wheat and tares, wise and witless virgins, good and bad fish, etc.).

33. Right hand—The position of honor. The King could bestow upon them no higher token of approval than to give them a place at his right hand.

34. The King—The change from "Son of man" is noteworthy. Seated upon his throne, in glorious majesty, with all people before him, his state is kingly. "This King not only comes in his kingdom (Matt. 16. 28), but has kingdoms to bestow, which have been waiting throughout all time for their proper sovereigns." Compare Dan. 7. 27.

Inherit—Receive as the rightful portion of sons.

27. When saw we thee?—Some have professed Christ and thought to be judged by that profession, whereas their deeds of kindness have been taken as a test of the sincerity of their profession. Others have never known Christ, but, having exercised themselves in Christ-like charity, have proven themselves to be his friends. Both classes are surprised. But we need not be. The ultimate test is not some artificial conformity to a creed, but the exhibition of love which is the rarest fruit of the Spirit of Christ. 40. Ye did it unto me—The words in Heb. 2. 11 come to mind. This is perfect brotherhood.

41. Note the changes in this address to the wicked from that to the righteous. They are cursed, not of my Father (34), but as an inevitable outcome of their willful life. Their doom was prepared, not from the foundation of the world, nor for them, but for the devil and his angels. The power and opportunity of escape, therefore, was ever theirs.

Eternal fire. There are here two questions of interest: (1) What is the nature of this fire, or punishment? (2) That it is prepared for the devil and his angels, spiritual and not corporal beings, precludes the possibility of its being material. Something like remorse, which consumes the soul like a fire, must be meant. (2) What is meant by "eternal"? The authorized version gives no help here, for it translates the same word in two ways: "everlasting fire," "eternal life" (46). The word in the New Testament is qualitative rather than quantitative. It does not refer to an indefinite continuance of time, but to a certain kind of experience. Endless punishment and eternal punishment are not of necessity the same, though they may be. However, the loss or suffering involved is irreparable.

ORANGE BLOSSOM'S STORY.

First Bride Who Wore it was a Gardener's Daughter.

Once upon a time there lived in an Eastern country a king who was somewhat of a botanist. He took the greatest interest in the cultivation of all sorts of trees and plants, and had agents in various parts of the world to secure the best and most handsome shrubbery possible, with which to adorn the royal gardens. One day a famous scientist made the king a present of a magnificent orange tree in full bloom. The orange was at that time unknown in the region of which we are speaking, and the king was delighted. He had the tree planted in the palace gardens, and saw that it was carefully guarded. A certain ambassador from the West saw this tree and offered the king a large sum for a cutting of it. The king, however, refused, for he prized the tree as a rarity, and did not wish it to become plentiful.

Now, the chief gardener had a beautiful daughter who greatly admired the tree, and who used to come and sit under it and dream of the man she loved. Her father would not let her marry this gallant youth because he was poor. It happened that the gardener accidentally broke off a piece of the blossom, and the girl, stooping, picked up the spray and twined it carefully in her hair. Later as she wandered in the garden, whom should she meet but the ambassador. He was quick to notice the spray in her hair, and offered her a vast treasure of gold in exchange for it. She sold it to him and at once bestowed the money on her lover, thus sweeping away the only obstacle that came between them. They were married without delay, and we presume, lived happily ever afterwards.

On her wedding morn the gardener's daughter secretly obtained another spray of the tree and wore it in her hair, hoping that the blossom would bring her good fortune in the future as it had in the past. Thus she set an example that has ever since induced brides to wear a crown of orange blossoms in honor of H. M. King Cupid, the first and only King of Love.

DESTITUTE IN THE ARCTIC.

Terrible Story of Privations in the Icefields.

After a winter of terrible privation in the Arctic the members of the crew of the Dutch whaler Janita Agatha have been rescued.

The schooner sailed from Dundee, Scotland, thirteen months ago, and, as nothing further was heard of her, the Dundee schooner Thomas was despatched with a search expedition. The Thomas has returned to Dundee bringing back two of the crew of the Janita Agatha, who had a thrilling story of Arctic adventure to tell.

Last Autumn, when well into the Arctic seas, the Dutch schooner was overtaken by a heavy gale, in the course of which she was dashed against a huge iceberg. Faced with the prospect of being cast adrift in the Arctic at that season, the crew worked desperately to save the schooner, but their efforts were vain, and at length, worn out and hopeless, they had to make their escape from the sinking ship. For days they drifted about in an open boat, buffeted about by heavy seas, and in constant danger of being sent to the bottom by the icebergs with which those waters abound. Eventually they succeeded in making Blacklead, in the Cumberland Gulf, and were given shelter in the ice huts of a tribe of friendly Eskimos.

Their privations were not by any means at an end, however, as they had to live through a severe Arctic winter on native fare, consisting of raw seal flesh. With such an unspectacular large number of months to feed, even this means of bare subsistence was threatening to give out, and the entire village was faced with starvation when the first of the Dundee whalers arrived.

Happily, no lives were lost, despite the severity of their sufferings, and the remainder of the Janita Agatha's crew are returning home on board the Dundee whaler Scotia.

When a man is compelled to eat his words his appetite is quickly satisfied.

CURED BY "STARVING"

MUSIC TEACHER'S NEURAS
TRENIA VANISHED.

She Lived on Diet of Rice and Eggs with Abundance of Hot Water.

Many are the stories one hears of people who have found health through various "starvation" cures. The latest is from a Brooklyn music teacher who cured herself of a bad case of neurasthenia, that bighorn of city people. At the time she started the treatment every nerve in her body was affected, her left arm and hand being so bad that one finger was practically useless.

HER DIET OF RICE AND EGGS.

Her physician advised her to try the "rice and egg" diet, and for six months she followed the schedule faithfully, not even allowing herself a piece of candy. For breakfast she took a quart of hot lemonade (which was in reality nothing but hot water with some lemon and a little cinnamon to take off the insipid taste), and one saucer of rice eaten with very little butter, sugar and nutmeg, or with milk without sugar.

For dinner she had one soft-boiled egg, one slice of toasted bread, and a quart of water, not cold. For supper it was a saucer of rice, a piece of toast and either an orange, stewed prunes or baked apple and a quart of water. Just before retiring she drank a quart of the hot lemonade flavored with spice.

BECAUSE DIFFERENT BEING.

She says—"Not one thing, not one drop, other than I have mentioned, passed my lips for five and one-half months. I lost a little in weight, dropping from 134 to 127 pounds, but I never felt better or more active in my life after the first few days, during which I felt the natural craving of habit for 'something more.'"

"If between meals I felt hungry I would drink a good portion of water, either hot or cold, but if hot I would usually add the lemon and spice, as being more 'tasty.'"

"To say that the diet helped me does not express it. I was a new woman. Instead of feeling fagged and dragged all the time and sleeping poorly, deriving no benefit from my sleep, I had the light and buoyant sensation as if treading on air which comes from perfect circulation and digestion."

"I would like to say that for the last four months I have not had meat of any kind on my table often more than twice a week, and we are all well nourished and up to the mark as regards weight and strength, and with no dyspepsia."

QING GEORGE'S MAIL.

His Majesty Will Soon See Own Portrait on the Stamps.

King George is receiving about one hundred more letters per day than the late King, and in the case of private letters he is even more particular than was his father in personally answering each missive on the day it is received. On an average King George receives six hundred letters a day. Many of them are from cranks, who write giving advice on affairs of state. A great number come from charity organizations requesting subscription or patronage.

Queen Mary receives about three hundred letters a day, and she, too, is very punctilious in the matter of replies. At the General Post Office there are two sorting clerks always on duty attending only to Royal correspondence, and letters to any member of the Royal Family are delivered by special messenger.

King Edward, who wrote voluminous letters to his many "cousins" and nephews in Europe, carried on much of his correspondence from the writing room of the Marlborough Club. When he was away abroad he wrote regularly to his grandson, now Prince of Wales, and the boy replied once a week.

A tremendous stimulus has been given to stamp collecting by King George, who has the finest collection probably in the world. His latest acquisition was one of the latest stamps lately printed two-penny stamps, printed upon which King Edward's portrait upon other day and only six stamps remain. One of them was presented to the King, another to the Prince of Wales, and a third will be preserved at the British Museum. Mystery surrounds the present postage place of the other three, but they are believed to be in the hands of Government officials.

The new stamps with King George's portrait will be ready in a few weeks hence, and are stated to be a distinct artistic improvement on the present ones.

You can't depend on a fast clock or a fast young man.

Parents are Responsible

J. J. Kelso, superintendent of neglected children, has this very important paragraph concerning children on the street: "Parents cannot be too often reminded of the great evil of allowing children the freedom of the streets after dark. The habit should never be allowed to grow on young people, for it is a habit that is acquired early and hard to break up later. Highly respectable mothers are at fault in this particular, and not until it is too late do they realize the mistake. How often we have had to listen to sad stories of youthful wrongdoing, and while listening have realized that parental carelessness was largely the cause of it all. Home should be made a pleasant place for the children and they should be taught by the stern rule of parental authority that street corner loitering will not be tolerated."

Canadian Northern Railway

The work on this line between Toronto and Trenton is everywhere well advanced, and the sub-contractors on grading are moving on beyond Trenton, from which grading is being gone on with to Belleville. The route as approved through Sidney township, is north of the highway of Trenton, to a point east of Belleville cemetery, thence south of the highway to the city. H. K. Wicksteed, Chief Locating Engineer, recently arrived in Belleville, for the purpose of going over the route located for the line easterly of that city, so as to connect it up at Deseronto with the recently acquired Bay of Quinte Ry. This will necessitate a route following the bay shore, crossing the branch lines to the cement works on a viaduct, and keeping along the bay front to Deseronto. The Bay of Quinte Ry. will be utilized to Sydenham, from which place it is about 92 miles to Ottawa.

The Toronto-Trenton section of the line is expected to be opened for traffic about two months hence, and it is hoped to have work on the Trenton-Deseronto section sufficiently far advanced as to have it ready for traffic during the summer of 1911, and the rest of the line into Ottawa ready by the end of that year.—Belleville Ontario.

Stories at Less Than a Cent Apiece

In the fifty-two issues of a year's volume The Youth's Companion prints fully two hundred and fifty stories. The subscription price of the paper to Canada is but $2.00, so that the stories cost less than a cent apiece, without reckoning in all the rest of the contents— anecdotes, humorous sketches, the doctor's weekly article, papers on popular topics by famous men and women.

Although the two hundred and fifty stories cost so little, they are not cheap stories. In variety of scene, diversity of incident, skill and truth in character-drawing, they cannot be excelled.

The Announcement for 1911, beautifully illustrated, giving more detailed particulars of these stories and other new features which greatly enlarge the paper, will be sent to any address in Canada free with sample copies of current issues.

Every new Canadian subscriber receives free The Companion's Art Calendar for 1911, lithographed in twelve colors and gold, and if the subscription is received at once, all the issues for the remaining years of 1910.

Wellman's News

The church officials are congratulating themselves upon the success of their anniversary and thank offering services which were held on Sunday. Rev. L. S. Wight, B. A., Stirling, preached two earnest and practical sermons in the morning and evening to large audiences, many in the evening failing to gain admittance. Special music by the choir was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The thank-offering amounted to over $85.

Mr. and Mrs. Abner Hogle, Trenton, former residents of this place, have been visiting friends around here.

Mrs. Tucker, Madoc, has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Wm. Mack.

Mr. Low, Pembroke, is a guest at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Geo. H. McGee.

A young son has come to stay at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Franks, Jr.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. John Preston is seriously ill. There were a number of visitors in Wellman's and vicinity on Sunday—too numerous to mention.

Those Who Succeed

Receipts for success are many. Advice to young men is cheap. But imitation of other men's results without the imitation of other men's causes is useless. What sort of a creek could you make by simply pouring water into a ravine, without having a spring and a source? By all means emulate the actions of great men, but find out the secret springs of their lives.

There is one secret that lies at the bottom of every man's success. It is optimism. It gave America to Columbus. It gave this country to the early settlers. It conquers every difficulty, dissolves every obstacle, spans every division and compels a way to success.

The optimistic man is never discouraged, therefore he never gives up but continues until he succeeds. No task is too hard for him, no trial too bitter. When a pessimist is up against a brick wall he thinks of it as such and gets faint-hearted. An optimist thinks of it as a compilation of small bricks and begins to tear them asunder. The pessimist thinks of his long hours and sighs, the optimist thinks of the experience he is gaining. The pessimist grumbles because of those ahead of him, the optimist talks of the hundreds behind him. Courage ensures success. Pessimism encourages faint-heartedness and failure. Optimism generates courage and success.

A Good Investment

The late Hon. David Davis once said: "Each year every local paper gives from $100 to $5,000 in free lines for the benefit of the community in which it is located. No other agency can or will do this. The local editor, in proportion to his means, does more for his town than any other ten men, and in fairness, man with man, he ought to be supported, not because you happen to like him, or admire his writings; but because a local paper is the best investment a community can make. It may not be brilliant or crowded with great thoughts, but financially it is more of a benefit to a community than a preacher or teacher. Understand us now, we do not mean morally or intellectually, but financially, and yet on the moral question you will find that the majority of local papers are on the right side of the question. Fire near Meyersburg

On Monday afternoon Mr. Hugh Ross was so unfortunate as to lose his barn by fire. The cause of the fire is a mystery. Several men were at work filling a silo and nothing was observed of the fire until the flames shot up through the roof. It is supposed it was caused either by a spark from the engine or from the windmill. Mr. Ross lost his barn and all this year's crop, and although insured his loss will be heavy.—Campbellford Herald.

The dirigible balloon, "America," carrying Walter Wellman and a crew of five, in an attempt to reach Europe by trans-Atlantic flight, was wrecked at sea and abandoned. Wellman and his entire crew were rescued by the steamer Trent, and taken back to New York. The airship was about 250 miles off Cape Hatteras when abandoned.

THE SECRET OF HER POWER;

Or, A TRUTH NEVER OLD.

CHAPTER IX.

Gervase saunters into his hostess' boudoir the next morning, availing himself of the privilege accorded to that distant relationship which it pleases them both to raise into an intimate coquetry. Gervase sits down and makes himself agreeable, and relates to her many little episodes of his recent experiences.

Gervase does not make any confidences; he only tells her things which amuse her and reveal much about her acquaintances; nothing about himself. He smokes some of her favorite cigarettes, praises some new china, suggests an alteration in the arrangement of the fans, and makes critical discourses apropos of her collection of snuff boxes.

When he is going away he lingers a moment intently looking at a patch box of vernis Martin, and says, with studied carelessness: "Dolly, tell me, when did you make the acquaintance of Mme. Sabaroff?"

"Last year at Cannes; why do you want to know?" She came and staid with us at Orme last Easter. Is she not perfectly charming?"

"Very good looking," says Gervase, absently. "You don't know anything about her, then?" "Know!" repeats his hostess. "What should I know? What everybody does, I suppose. I met her first at the Duchesse de Luyne's. You can't possibly mean that there can be anything—anything—"

"Oh, no," replies Gervase, but it produces on his questioner the same effect as if he had said "Oh, yes."

"How odious men are! such scandal-mongers," says Lady Usk, angrily. "Talk of our 'damning with faint praise'! There is nothing comparable to the way in which a man destroys a woman's reputation just by raising his eyebrows or twisting his mustache."

"I have no mustache to twist, and am sure there is no reputation which I wish to destroy," says her cousin.

"Then why do you ask me where I made her acquaintance?" "My dear Dolly! Surely the most innocent and general sort of question ever on the lips of any human being!"

"Possibly; not in the way you said it, however; and when one knows that you were a great deal in Russia it suggests five hundred things—five thousand things—and of course one knows he was shot in a duel about her, and I believe people have talked."

"I have never helped them to talk. When do they not talk?" And beyond this she cannot prevail upon him to go; he pretends that the Princess Sabaroff is beyond all possibility of any approach of calumny, but the protestation produces on her the impression that he could tell her a great deal wholly to the contrary if he chose.

"She certainly was staying with Mme. de Luyne's," she insists. "Whoever said the lady might not stay with the Archbishop of Canterbury?" replies Gervase. She is irritated and vexed.

Xenia Sabaroff is her idol of the moment, and if her idol were proved human she would be very angry. She reflects that she will have Dodo and the children kept more strictly in the school-room, and not let them wander about over the park, as they do with their Russian friend most mornings.

"One can never be too careful with children of that age," she muses; "and they are terribly evil-likes already."

Dorothy Usk's friendships, though very ardent, are like most friendships which exist in society—they are likely to blow about with every breeze. She is cordial, kind, and in her way sincere; but she is what her husband characterizes as "weathercocky."

"What's the row my lady? You look ruffled," inquires Usk, coming into her boudoir with a sheet of half-opened letters in his hand. "There are always things to annoy me," she answers, vaguely.

"It is an arrangement of a prudent Providence to prevent our affections being set on this world," replies Usk, piously.

"His wife's only comment on this religious declaration is an impatient twist to the tail of her Maltese dog."

Usk proceeds to turn over to her such letters as bore him—they are countable by dozens; the two or three which interest him have been read in the gun-room and put away in an inside pocket.

"Mr. Bruce could attend to all these," she says, looking with some disgust at the correspondence. Bruce is his secretary.

Headaches and Neuralgic Pains Promptly Cured by "Fruit-a-tives."

Where there are frequent attacks of Neuralgia and Headaches, there is always Constipation. Weakness of the Kidneys and Blood Poisoning. Non-action of the bowels compels the blood to absorb foul matter which should have passed from the body. Weak Kidneys fail to filter from the blood the necessary amount of water. The blood thus becomes poisoned and it is this poisoned blood which hurts the nerves and causes Neuralgia and Headaches.

"Fruit-a-tives," made from fruit juices, acts on the bowels and kidneys and is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Russians—"Lady Usk interrupts the great man, angrily: "Very much au mieux! What barbarous polyglot language for a great critic like you!—must you have the assistance of bad grammar in two tongues to take away my friend's reputation?"

"Reputations aren't taken away so easily; they're very hardy plants now-a-days, and will stand a good deal of bad weather."

"Mr. Wootton is shocked. "Oh, dearest Lady Usk! Reputation! You couldn't think I meant to imply of any guest of yours—only, you know, he was secretary in Petersburg when he was Lord Baird, and so—and so—"

"Well! It doesn't follow that he is the lover of every woman in Petersburg!"

"Mr. Wootton is infinitely distressed. "Oh, indeed! I didn't mean anything of that sort."

"You did mean everything of that sort, murmurs his hostess. "But you see he admired her very much, was constantly with her, and yesterday I saw they don't speak to each other, so I was curious to know what could be the reason."

"I believe she didn't recognize him."

SEEN IN PARIS SHOPS.

New handbags are perfectly square. Everything tends to smaller proportions. Shawl collars are still a feature of coats. Egyptian embroideries are in high favor.

The low lying effect in hats still prevails. The banded-in effects are even seen in coats. Denver hats with enormous rosettes of tulle are worn. Some of the richest opera cloaks have kimono sleeves.

The badger aigrette is in high favor and is beautiful. Large wings are in demand for tailored and semi dress hats. The chenille dot is going to have another inning in veilings.

White fox and ermine continue to be the leading evening furs. Metallic, beaded and Persian effects are popular in lace. A late fad is the use of shadow (chintilly under white chiffon). Roses and other flowers made of satin ribbon are greatly in vogue.

Dressy gowns for afternoon are being made of striped satin foulards. Antique brocades are fashionable for elegant evening gowns and cloaks.

Most of the colored laces are shown in black with a design worked in colors. Sleeves seem to have definitely decided to remain short on dressy waists.

Shaded or ombre plumes, willow in style, are favored for large dressy hats.

On the Farm

METHODS OF MILKING. Most men think they know all about milking—can't tell them anything about that; and yet, if we could know what the cows think on that question, it may be we would find that there are some things for us to learn. It is worth while, at any rate, to look to our ways in this respect and get all the suggestions we can. For when we have said and done all, the process of milking is one of the most important farmers have to perform.

First, then, is sympathy on the part of the milker. It never pays to be harsh with cows. If this could only be deeply impressed on the minds of men everywhere it would add thousands of dollars to the farm revenue of the country.

And then, a good grip with the hand counts for much. Some men have a way of bending the fingers so that the ends stick right into the sides of the teats. If the nails are long, milkers who do that cause cows a good deal of pain, and anything that does that hinders a cow from doing her best; because cows have nerves and anything that effects them unfavorably makes the cow hold back part of her milk, and I am quite sure that what she does give is not as rich as it otherwise would be. The nails should be well trimmed and the fingers kept out pretty straight, only curving to clasp the teat firmly and evenly.

There are milkers who jerk the teats hard when at their work. This certainly cannot be very comfortable to the cow. Far better to squeeze steadily, holding the hand up in an easy position. The cow cannot help appreciating this effort on the part of her master to be thoughtful of her comfort.

A cow that has a good appetite, eats heartily and keeps thin in flesh while giving milk is usually a good one to keep. The dairyman who takes his money out of the savings bank to build a silo makes a good investment of idle capital. An ounce of salt per day is about right for a cow. They need a little more in summer than in winter.

A good stiff brush made like a paint brush that will reach every corner and crevice is a fine thing with which to wash milk cans. Twenty-five good cows will make a profit, but a thousand poor ones will send a man into bankruptcy in short order.

Pains Disappear Before It.—No one need suffer pain when they have available Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. If not in the house when required it can be procured at the nearest store, as all merchants keep it for sale. Rheumatism and all bodily pains disappear when it is applied, and should that at any time return, experience teaches the user of the Oil how to deal with them.

If you can buy the cow that the other man doesn't want to sell, you are generally pretty safe. Never put fresh milk into a warm vessel. If it had been in the sun it should be filled with cold water at least half an hour before milking time.

A chemist cannot find that a silo adds anything to the nutritive elements in a cornstalk, but it does add palatability, and this counts for a great deal. In the causes of infant mortality cholera morbus figures frequently, and it may be said that complaints of the bowels are great destroyers of child life. If all mothers would avail themselves of so effective a remedy as Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial many a little one could be saved. This Cordial can be given with safety to the smallest child, as there is no injurious substance in it.

No one can afford to keep a fat dairy cow. If a cow gets fat while in milk she uses too much of her feed for other purposes than making milk of it.

The man who does not get more than two dollars' return for every dollar's worth of feed his cows consume has not yet learned the first lesson of good dairy management.

National Life Co. Still Getting the Best Men.

The continued improvement in all business methods is nowhere better exemplified than in Life Insurance. Formerly, a man who had failed at everything else, solicited insurance as a last resort. But now the Insurance Companies are looking for men who have been successful so frequently as to have acquired the "successful habit." They want keen, alert, brainy men, who are out to make big money and who also like the business.

Money spent for Life Insurance Premiums is no longer considered an expense. It is in reality one of the surest and safest investments that any man can make. Just now the National Life Insurance Co. of Toronto have vacancies for good men at a number of points. They have some interesting information to send any prospective agents who will write them for it.

KEPT HER BUSY.

The Way She Tried to Discover the Telephone Numbers.

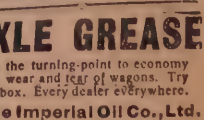

"I don't believe that the public schools teach their graduates to use their minds," remarked a well known citizen of Philadelphia the other day. "Here's a story just to illustrate what I mean: 'I got a secretary last summer who had just been graduated with high honors from the Commercial High School. She had been picked out for me as the best girl in her class, and I found her excellent in all that required methodical, parrot-like work. 'One day I jotted down some telephone numbers that I wanted to remember and, having a poor memory, forgot in the course of the morning whose the numbers were or what the business was upon which I wanted to phone. 'So I called Miss Blank just as I was going out and said, 'Before you get your luncheon I wish you'd find out for me whose those telephone numbers are.' 'Two hours later I came back, and Miss Blank was sitting at her desk, weary and perseveringly studying the telephone book. 'I asked her if she had got some letters written that I had left, if she had lunched, if she had done several little things. She said no and then explained: 'You see, it takes me a long time to read through the book till I come to the numbers you want,' she said. 'I haven't had time to do anything else!'"

The Increased Cost of Living

A writer in McClure's Charges what he calls "a plague of gold" with the principal responsibility for the present high cost of living. It is said that more gold has been produced during the past fifteen years than was produced during the four centuries following the discovery of America, and as a result the price of everything that enters into the cost of living is about double what it was fifteen years ago. The price of labor, both skilled and unskilled is now double, or nearly so, what it was fifteen years ago. The writer promises a still farther increase in all commodities, consequent on the increased production of gold. He says: "Five or ten years from now, if the increase in gold supply continues, one dollar will not buy more than 40¢, and will be purchased power as compared with its value in 1895. By 1930 the gold dollar may be as easy to get as a silver quarter is to-day, and of no greater exchange value than in the quarter has at the present time."

The writer of the article, as well as many others, fears that serious economic and political consequences may follow as a result of the depreciation in the purchasing power of money. We have hope, however, that the evils prophesied may be averted by wise statesmanship on the part of our rulers.

Educational Injustice

Campbell Herald

The transition stage in the educational system of this Province is causing much confusion and in some cases ridiculous situations. Our notice was brought to this fact at the last meeting of the School Board when it was stated that two students, who had passed the Normal School Entrance Examination, were sent back from Peterboro Normal because they had failed to pass a preliminary examination set by the Department of Education for those students who have come from a High School which has not been designated an "approved" school by the Inspector. Several other students entered the same Normal School without having tried any preliminary examination.

The question naturally arises, why is one pupil not required to pass such an examination while another is compelled to do so? The conditions under which schools are "approved" has been in so far as Campbellford High School is concerned, a matter of opinion rather than in the subjects taught. Under the regulations where schools are "approved" there must be a certain standard of equipment measured up to, and the Inspector who, in his report, sees fit to recommend that such a school be on the approved list, ascertains that certain subjects have been taught in the lower school and examinations passed on these subjects, certificates being required from the principal to that effect. Apart from the examinations there is a standard of equipment which the regulations call for and without which no school is "approved." This is where the hardship lies. If it were a matter of scholarship merely it would be different, but when a pupil is burdened with an extra examination simply because the school which he or she attended had not single seats and tables, surely there is a grave injustice. The case in point is this: Two students who have been away from school for two years are required to take an examination on work which they have not taken up since their attendance in the lower school here. Is it fair or just that they should be sent home for not passing the examination while others perhaps not better informed in these subjects are not even asked to try the examination.

We have no fault to find with anything in the way of reform for the improvement of our educational system. We heartily approve of the gradual abolition of the model school, but we think the change has been made too suddenly. We admit that the subjects required for the examination are very important and we believe they are too important to be abandoned at the close of the course in the lower school. We contend that such subjects as grammar and arithmetic should be on the examination list for the teacher's course and not dropped at the end of the second year in the High School. With the changed conditions reforms are needed, but no one can dispute the importance of these subjects named, in which many of our teachers are sadly deficient.

If these pupils have been sent home on account of lack of knowledge in a certain subject, why are the others not tested also? If it is because the school they attended in a certain year was not properly equipped, then it is absurd.

The whole difficulty seems to be the suddenness of the transition. Had the department set a standard of equipment to be met in say two or three years and the matter of information on the various subjects be tested in the one final teacher's examination, this difficulty would be almost eliminated.

Much has been done in the way of reform both in public and high school regulations that is commendable, but the scarcity of teachers is still with us and may be for some time to come, but with the large numbers now attending the Normal schools and the more tempting salaries, the prospect seems to be brightening.

A Century of Missions

Last week the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions celebrated at Boston the one hundredth anniversary of its establishment. The oldest of existing American missionary organizations, it is exceeded in age by only two or three of those mentioned by the Protestant churches of England. Its century of history contains have been during which foreign missions have become no longer merely an aspiration of the faithful, but a fact seriously to be reckoned with in the progress of the world.

During that century missions have suffered much from prejudice and misrepresentation, as they have profited much from the self-denial and devotion of their supporters. Materially their success has long been assured. They collect and expend twenty-four million dollars a year; they number thousands of earnest and consecrated workers, and have millions—perhaps eight or nine millions in all—of converted adherents in the heathen countries of the world.

Nor do these facts tell the whole story. The share they have had in preparing the way for the commerce and civilization of the Western nations throughout Asia and Africa, the essential part they have borne in the awakening and inspiration of China, Japan and Turkey, the introduction of the Bible and the Christian ideal to millions who dwelt in darkness, and the educational, medical and charitable work they have encouraged and sustained are achievements no less remarkable than the amount of actual evangelization they have accomplished.

Some statements used to sneer at missionaries. No one does so now. Tested by the low standard of mere success, missionaries have become worthy of respect. The tribute of admiration which a life of heroism and single-hearted devotion demands the world has always had to pay. From Saint Francis Xavier to the martyrs of Peking-fu, the missionary, the hungerer for souls, has counted his life as nothing, if so he might win some small part of the world back to God. Founded and administered by such men and women, is it strange that foreign missions have succeeded?—Youth's Companion.

Women's Right to Vote

An important decision was handed out by Judge Barrett of Port Elgin, on Friday last, Oct. 14, during the revision of the voters' list. That place is to have a vote on local option in January next, and men on both sides were present in connection with additions to be made to the lists. There were twenty-five names in all considered. When it came to a number of women who were down as tenants his Honor Judge Barrett decided that women could not vote on tenant qualification, and that those who were already on the list as tenants could be sworn. The decision was received with general surprise, as it has been the general rule to allow women to vote who were on the municipal list as tenants. Rev. Mr. Cooley, who is President of the local option organization, when seen in the afternoon said that the organization would take the matter up with the temperance officials in Toronto and have it referred to the Legal Committee. He contended that the ruling was out of harmony with the general practice in the Province. Secretary E. H. Spence, of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance, has signified his intention of fighting the decision of Judge Barrett at Port Elgin, that women who are tenants and not freeholders had not the right to vote. He fears that every local option by-law in the province could be upset by such an interpretation of the law. He claims that there are decisions of other judges to the contrary, and legal steps will be taken immediately.

Every little while the doors of our houses are opened and "free samples" of pills and nostrums are thrown in the hallways. This is against the law in many states of the union, and should be prohibited in this Province. Small children get hold of these packages and eat the contents, imagining they are candies, sometimes with fatal results. We live in a "patent" medicine age and a lot of people are of the opinion that they have got something wrong with them. The papers are full of bogus testimonials from weak, silly men and women, who believe they have been cured by these fakes, and are actually willing to have their photographs printed. It doesn't matter a continental what these deluded creatures look like, and the positively harmful thing is that we are growing up a race which is given to constant "doping." If there is one thing in life some people exhibit credulity in, it is their health. They always imagine they have a first-class set of "symptoms." In the meantime when a litter of samples is thrust into your doorway, put the stuff in the stove. It won't hurt the range.

How Do You Fight?

Did you tackle that trouble that came your way?
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hid your face from the light of day?
With a craven soul and faint?
Or a trouble's son or a trouble's daughter,
Or a trouble's what you make it,
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only how did you take it?

You are beaten to earth? Well what of that?
Come up with a smiling face.
It's nothing against you to go down flat.
But to lie there—that's disgrace.
The harder you're thrown, why the higher you bounce.
Be proud of your blackened eye.
It isn't the fact that you're hit that counts,
It's how did you fight—and why?

And though you be done to death, what then?
If you battled the best you could,
If you played your part in the world of men.
Why the critics will call it good.
Death comes with a crawl or comes with a pounce.
Isn't the fact that you're dead that counts?
But only how did you die?

THE OIL WELL SHOOTER.

Sometimes Blown Into Eternity With His Own Ammunition.

In certain of the petroleum producing districts it becomes necessary sometimes in opening an oil well—sometimes when the well has become clogged or apparently exhausted—to begin or re-open the flow by exploding nitroglycerin at the bottom of the well. This explosive is employed because it is exploded readily by the dropping of a weight upon it. A man who carries nitroglycerin from well to well for this purpose is known in the oil regions as a "shooter."

The shooter has a wagon in which to carry his explosive. A square box under the seat is carefully padded, and when it has been solidly filled with cans of nitroglycerin, which is a molasses-like fluid, he fastens down the cover and drives slowly away to the well that he is to shoot. Usually he makes the trip very early in the morning to avoid the customary travel and so diminish the chance of danger.

For the most part the roads are bad, and the wagon jolts along in a way to make any one but an old shooter decidedly nervous. "If it is dark there is great danger that a wheel may drop into a hole with force enough to detonate the explosive. Several wagons bearing shooters and their loads have been blown up, but no one ever lived to tell what sort of jar caused the explosion.

In such a case little is ever found except the great hole in the ground which the explosion has dug, with possibly a wheel of the wagon a quarter of a mile away in one direction and another in the opposite direction. The shooter generally takes from 80 to 240 quarts of nitroglycerin in his wagon. The smaller amount is quite enough if it should explode to leave no trace of the driver of the vehicle.

When the shooter reaches the well which is to be treated long torpedo tubes are placed within the casing of the well, and the nitroglycerin is poured carefully into them. The well may be 1,500 feet deep and is seldom less than a thousand. When one of the tubes is filled it is lowered with the utmost care to the bottom of the well. This operation is repeated until the shooter is satisfied that the load is heavy enough to accomplish the purpose. When all is ready a bar of iron, known as a "go-devil," is dropped into the well. The instant it leaves his hand the shooter takes to his heels, seeking a place of safety.

Suddenly the earth trembles; there is a crash, followed by a snap; a muffled sound arises and becomes louder and louder until a column of oil and water shoots from 75 to 100 feet into the air. The country for hundreds of feet around is filled with clouds of spray floating to leeward. When this subsides the well is in operation and the shooter receives his fee and drives away.—Harper's Weekly.

The Dead Man's Hand.

Charmas as cures for sickness were common in England a century ago. Lady Wake, who was born in 1800, tells of a grewsome cure adopted for the removal of some birthmarks which disfigured her face. Her mother was persuaded that "a dead man's hand laid upon my cheek and hands would effectually remove the marks," she writes. "As a man could not be killed for the occasion, it was necessary to wait till some one died. An old man at last did die in one of the nearest cottages, and I was taken there in my sleep. I remember afterward being constantly stopped by the widow, who always examined my cheek in order to ascertain the state of her husband's body, as the marks she told my nurse, would certainly fade away as he turned into dust. Whatever the cause of the cure, the marks in time disappeared."

"It's the Cut."

An aged country rector who had an old tailor as his clerk, returning from his church one Sunday with the latter, thus addressed him: "Thomas, I cannot think how it is that our church should be getting thinner, for I am sure I preach as well as ever I did and ought to have far more experience than I had when I first came among you." "Indeed," replied Thomas. "I'll tell you what; old parsons nowadays are just like old tailors, for I'm sure I sew as well as ever I did in my life, and the cloth is the same, but it's the cut, sir. Ah, it's the new cut!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Flower of the Air.

There is a plant in Chile and a similar one in Japan called the "flower of the air." It is so called because it appears to have no root and is never fixed to the earth. It twines round a dry tree or sterile rock. Each shoot produces two or three flowers like a lily—white, transparent and odoriferous. It is capable of being transported 600 to 700 miles and vegetates as it travels suspended on a twig.

A Leading Citizen.

"Didn't you tell me Faro Joe was one of the leading citizens of Crimmon Gulch?" "Well," answered Broncho Bob, "he was. When he left town he led the vigilance committee by a quarter of a mile clean to the next county."—Washington Star.

AN IMMENSE PRICE-SAVING TYPEWRITER SALE

These typewriters are flawless—the equal in EVERY respect of ANY typewriter, regardless of price. In no way damaged, shop-worn or inferior.

VISIBLE WRITING—Every letter is in plain sight as soon as printed—a necessity now.

UNIVERSAL KEYBOARD—All standard typewriters have adopted the universal keyboard—you would waste time learning any other. The Oliver has 84 characters.

QUALITY OF THE WORK—The beautiful work turned out on this splendid typewriter will give your letters distinction: the quality of the typewriting has a marked effect upon the success of a letter. The U-shaped typebar and wide, smooth bearings insure perfect alignment, while the one-piece escapement mechanism gives a perfect spacing between the letters. The type are exceedingly hard; they make a clear, clean-cut impression.

CARBON-PAPER COPIES—An excellent manifold because of the down stroke of the typebar—twenty copies if you like. Cuts a perfect stencil for mimeograph work.

RULED LINES—The simple variable-spacing device is instantly adjustable to write on ruled lines—draws horizontal or vertical lines with type and ribbon.

WRITES IN COLORS—The Oliver originated the two-color writing—no change of ribbon necessary to write in any color.

CARDS, BILLS, STATEMENTS, LABELS AND ALL MEMORANDUMS written with ease and dispatch on this handy machine.

EASY TO OPERATE—So simple any one can learn in a few minutes; elaborate instruction book sent with every machine.

LIGHT ACTION—The down stroke of the typebar, with its scientific lever principle and wide, smooth bearings, gives the Oliver an action that is the lightest found on any typewriter. It is a pleasure to strike the keys.

CONVENIENT—The ingenious arrangement of the working parts cannot be described adequately on paper, but will be fully appreciated by you when you use the machine.

WILL LAST A LIFETIME—Simplicity is the keynote of the Oliver construction. Less than one-third as many parts as the other machines. Will do a greater variety of work. There is practically no wear-out to this sturdy typewriter.

PORTABLE, COMPACT, EFFICIENT—The lightest of all standard machines. Most of the weight is in the base, which reduces vibration and places the working parts in a compact, convenient position. It is always ready for business—always efficient. It will do any practical thing that any typewriter will do.

Watson—Hagerman

The home of Mr. George Hagerman, Anson, was the scene of a happy event
when, on October 5th, his daughter, Emma J., was given in marriage to
Mr. Lindsay Watson of Burnbrae.

The marriage took place at 11.30 a.m., on the lawn in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. The bride, prettily gowned in cream, was attended by Miss Ella Allan, of Ryl-stone, and the groom was supported by the bride's brother, Mr. Wilbert Hagerman.

After the usual congratulations a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served from a marquee erected on the lawn. The happy couple left in the evening for their home in Burnbrae.

The Late Mrs. Ellen Smith

The funeral of the late Mrs. Ellen Smith took place on October 10th, at 2 p.m. from the residence of her son, Mr.
E. H. Smith, 10 Cataract Avenue, Niagara Falls, Ont. The deceased was born in Yorkshire, England, 84 years old, and is survived by two sons, E. H., of this city and George of Stirling, Ont., and one daughter, Mrs. Jas. Pickering, of Picton, Ont. The services were conducted at the home and grave by Rev.
A. P. Kennedy of the Baptist Church.
The pall bearers were Messrs. E. S.
Cole, L. J. South, T. A. Whittaker and Mr. Buckley. Many beautiful floral tributes were laid on the casket by loving friends and relatives.—The Daily Record, Niagara Falls.

October Rod and Gun

Big Game hunting is to the fore in the October issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor Ltd., Woodstock Ontario, and sportsmen intending to try their fortunes in the woods this season will find the number particularly attractive. Moose, deer, grizzlies, mountain lions and wolves are all told about, and both stories and illustrations are bound to find responsive echoes with all hunters. In each case the experience related are personal and therefore far more interesting than imaginary tales. In addition to big game stories there are numerous attractive papers dealing with other phases of outdoor life, and both the east and the west of Canada receive attention in this way.

October Athletic World

The October number of the Athletic World, which has just reached us, is a pronounced improvement in every department over past issues, its coast to coast treatment of the big things in the sphere of Canadian and universal sports is exhaustive and timely, its illustrations must be seen to be appreciated.

Tweed News: A petition praying the Governor General to commute the sentence of capital punishment recently passed upon Robert Parker for the murder of the late William Masters, is being circulated in the town and with very general approval. Much sympathy is expressed for his aged wife.

Peterboro Review: A form moves, a rifle is raised, the trigger is pulled, bang! The dogs are giving tongue—
"My God, I've shot Bill." This incident, yes, an incident—no, a tragedy—took place last fall and they wired the widow. She put on mourning and took in boarders. It will be repeated this year. The season when the fool looks the boat is over, and the season when the fool with gun enters the woods is about to arrive.

A very daring burglary was committed near Harold by some parties entering the cellar of Mr. John Bailey and stealing twelve or fourteen sealers of fruit.
The cupboard was locked but the parties seemed to know how to make short work of the fastenings, and particularly sorted out that part of the fruit that seem most tasteful to them, they knowing about what the sealers contained. It is not the first time that his house has been broken into and articles of wearing apparel have been taken, and this is not the first operation, either out side or in, that has taken place recently, and he warns those who are participating in this kind of work, as he has strong suspicions as to the guilty parties.

From the Lakeside News: On Wednesday evening a social was given in the school room of the Presbyterian Church by the members of the different Mission Bands, which was attended by a large number of the members of the congregation. A most enjoyable time was spent in games and other amusements. During the evening, Rev. Mr.
Burns, who has labored faithfully in the church during the past four years, and who leaves to take a graduate course in Princeton University, was presented with an address and a purse of money from the members of the congregation. Mrs. Burns, who has been actively identified with the different Mission Bands, was presented by the members with an address and purse of gold. Mr. and Mrs. Burns were completely taken by surprise, but thanked the donors for their expressions of good will and kindly feeling towards them.
Refreshments were afterwards served and a pleasant evening was brought to a close.

Rev. Mr. Burns preached his farewell sermon in the Presbyterian Church, Lakeside, last Sunday.

Death of Dr. Caniff

William Caniff, M. D., M. B. C. S., famous as a historian and physician, passed away in Belleville, Tuesday afternoon at the age of eighty years.
The deceased had been living there the last few years in seclusion owing to ill-health.

He was the author of "The Settlement of Upper Canada," and during the last few years he had been engaged in the revision of this work in two volumes.
The original edition of 1868 is now so rare that second-hand copies sell at as high a figure as $10 each. The village of Caniff, three miles from Belleville, was named in honor of his progenitors.

The Grand Trunk Railway is now operating part of their system by using the telephone for train despatching instead of the telegraph. It is probable that the whole system will be operated by telephone as soon as the necessary changes can be made.

The Presbyterian Anniversary

Last Sunday, October 18th, the Presbyterian church of this village held their anniversary services, conducted by Rev. Dr. McLeod, of Barrie. The evening service was the more largely attended as by a previous arrangement the Methodist church service was withdrawn, and consequently a great number of Methodists were able to attend.
Rev. Mr. Hiltz heartily thanked the Methodists for suspending their service and attending the Presbyterian Church in such large numbers. He also hoped that this generosity on the part of his sister church would be reciprocated by his own congregation as fully as it deserved, when next Sunday, the Methodist Church Anniversary would be held. Moreover, he hoped that the mutual fellowship of the two denominations in this community would be repeatedly renewed.

The sermon was upon two topics,
"Ourselves" and "Present." Their combination is very significant. Several thoughts are worthy of remembrance.
When introducing the first subject by contrasting the present day progressivness in missionary work with old-time indifference in this respect, Dr. McLeod remarked: "But we have nothing to boast about. There were martyrs in those days; and I don't suppose there's half as many people willing to die as martyr's death now as there were in those days." At another portion of the discourse, when alluding to the seeming tardiness of the Almighty in developing his purposes he observed: "God is never in a hurry. Some ministers are always in a stew about God's work.
They prepare a great program of their own and then hurry to work it out, but God prepares His own program and works it out in His own time." Another thought, or rather counsel we might also mention. Dr. McLeod was emphasizing the necessity of performing loving actions in the present, he said:
"Be generous in giving praise. Don't be always fault-finding. There's nothing so helpful to a person as a little praise. You like it yourselves; and there's nothing so encouraging to young people as commendation. They look for it."

We heartily acquiesce in all these sentiments and would strongly recommend this latter suggestion to those people who visibly wince, when, to preserve themselves from violating their own truthfulness or the ordinary principles of politeness they are compelled to acknowledge a brother virtuous or clever.

The Thank offering amounted to two hundred and sixty dollars with more to come in yet.

Barn Burned in Huntingdon

About four o'clock on Thursday afternoon neighbors saw smoke issuing from the barn of Walter J. Salisbury, situated about a mile east of Moira in the Third concession of Huntingdon. Mr. and Mrs. Salisbury were in Belleville at the time and only some little children were at home. How the fire originated has not yet been ascertained.
When help arrived the whole interior of the building was a mass of flames. The whole season's crop, as yet unthrashed, all the farm implements except a mower which was saved, a good horse and a number of fowls were burned, only the walls of the stone basement remain.
The loss is estimated at $3,000 with only a partial insurance.—Ontario.

Woodmen of the World Unveiled Monument

A ceremony which will long be remembered by the people of this village and surrounding country was held on Sunday afternoon October 9th, when the Woodmen of the World unveiled the monument erected to the memory of their deceased member, Sovereign Peter McC. Dingwall. Over fifty members marched in solemn procession from their lodge room to the cemetery, where a very impressive sight was beheld.

The erecting of a monument, costing no less than one hundred dollars, to the memory of any one of its deceased members is one of the outstanding features of the Society, and such a monument when erected is unveiled with striking ritualistic ceremony.

A large number of people from the surrounding country were present to witness the ceremony.

Twenty-two members drove down from Campbellford, and ten drove from Belleville to assist the members of the local camp.

Sovereign Nathan Grills of Campbell-ford had charge of the ceremony assisted by the members of the Belleville Camp. Sovereign Thrasher, acted as master of the ceremonies.

W. T. Collins, Head Consul, of Peterboro, was present, and gave a eulogy upon the deceased and upon the Order. He said in part, that from what he had learned regarding the deceased, he had left a monument more lasting than the one of mere stone, in the fact that he had made provision for his dependent ones, and those he loved best,
and had not left them to the cold charity of the world.

Mr. Collins is a forceful speaker and a very successful man in his work, always making many warm friends in each locality he visits.

The Bancroft Times says that wolves are very numerous in New Carlisle, and many sheep are being killed.

The Fall Fair of the East Peterboro Agricultural Society held at Norwood last week was a great success in every respect. The gate receipts were over one hundred dollars greater than last year, the total receipts being $1000.

SIX PERSONS PERISHED

Several Firemen Were Also Injured at Big Montreal Fire.

A despatch from Montreal says: Six lives were lost in the fire which destroyed the King's Hall building on St. Catherine Street west at 2 o'clock on Thursday morning. The dead are: F. Whittall, nightwatchman; Mrs. Whittall, wife; two small children of Whittall, Charles Threshie, of Boston, Mass., manager of billiard parlor; Harry Richards, employe of building.

With the thrilling rescue of Edgar Coates and John Jones, taken from the roof after an exciting fight by the firemen lasting fifteen minutes, it was supposed that all the occupants had escaped, and it was not until noon that relatives of the nightwatchman, F. Whittall, who, with his wife and two children, lived on the fifth floor, reported that nothing had been seen of him, and a careful search of the ruins was instituted. Then the remains of Whittall, with his two children in his arms, their heads covered by a blanket, were found, and but a few yards away those of his wife. All four had perished from asphyxiation, the bodies being but little burned.

On the third floor were found the remains of Charles Threshie, of Boston, who came to Montreal a month ago to assume the management of the billiard parlor, located on the first floor of the building, and who occupied a room on the third floor. Two employes of the building, Harry Richards, and a negro, whose name is unknown, are still missing, and their bodies are believed to be in the ruins, their rooms having been located on the top floor in the section of the building where the fire raged most fiercely.

Thirteen people slept in the place. Of these, Charles Price, the caretaker, his wife and child escaped by the front door; Dr. Adcock, dentist, escaped by means of a rope he kept for the purpose in his office on the third floor. Two men, Edgar Coates and John Jones, sought safety on the roof, from which they were rescued by the firemen, after the crowd on the street below had encouraged them for 15 minutes not to jump. The remaining seven perished.

During the progress of the fire several firemen sustained injuries, and some of them were taken to hospitals. They included Patrick Reilly, No. 10, arm broke and bruised; William Daniel, burns and bruises; Beauchemer, No. 12, internal injuries; J. Sanderson, No. 9, overcome by smoke. The ground floor of the building was divided into stores, while the remaining floor were occupied as offices, a billiard parlor, the King's Hall and sleeping apartments for the employes of the building. The total loss is placed at 150,000, covered by insurance.

GRAPES BROUGHT DEATH.

Youth Recovering from Typhoid Ate of Them Too Heartily.

A despatch from Detroit says: Grapes, of which he had partaken too heartily, were responsible for the death of George Hall, aged nineteen, a young London man, who passed away in the Detroit Hospital late on Thursday. Hall was just recovering from an attack of typhoid fever, and would have been discharged from the hospital on Friday. The fruit was brought in by a party of young lady visitors and Hall ate a quantity with relish. A relapse set in a few hours afterwards and resulted in death.

DRINK LESS, SAYS KAISER.

And Devote More Time to Athletics, is Advice to Students.

A despatch from Berlin says: In the course of a State banquet on Thursday night, concluding the celebration of the centenary of the University of Berlin, the Kaiser gave orders that a number of students, who had dined at a special table in the gallery, be presented to him. He engaged them in conversation, urging less drinking of alcoholic liquors, and adding that the students must devote more attention to outdoor sports.

FOUND PISTOL IN DRAWER.

Woman Accidentally Discharged It and is Wounded.

A despatch from Brantford says: Mrs. William Noyes, a Cathcart woman, is lying at the hospital here in a serious condition. While cleaning out a drawer at home she ran across an old pistol of her husband's, which was accidentally discharged. The bullet, which entered her shoulder, has not yet been located.

THE CHOLERA SPREADING.

Eleven Deaths in Italy in Twenty-four Hours.

A despatch from Rome says: Twenty-three new cases of cholera during the past twenty-four hours have been officially reported, one in the province of Bari, seven in the province of Caserta, one in the province of Naples, and one in the province of Salerno. Eleven deaths have occurred from the disease during the same period.

PARIS FACES FOOD FAMINE

Situation Caused by the Railway Strike in France Grows Worse.

A despatch from Paris says: The strike of the railroad men, which threatens to spread throughout the length and breadth of France, was denounced on Wednesday by Premier Briand as "an insurrection purely, built up on criminal foundations."

The Premier declared that the strike was called while negotiations were going on through himself and the Minister of Public Works for an adjustment of grievances, and he promised that the instigators of the strike would be criminally prosecuted.

The River Seine, which in January threatened to destroy Paris, now looms up in the role of a savior. The Government has made arrangements to rush food supplies to Paris from the sea, requisitioning all tugs, boats and barges to meet the crisis brought about by the stoppage of the railway service, and ease the food market shortage, which is already serious.

The employees of the Eastern and the Paris, Lyons & Mediterranean railways have not yet, to any appreciable extent, responded to the leaders' call to strike, and the Government's weapon of mobilization has induced some of those employed on the Northern road to return to their posts. Nevertheless, the Northern and Western railways are prostrated. The call to the colors has been ignored by the large majority, and at mass meetings held on Wednesday the strikers reiterated their determination not to respond to the call.

Much destruction has been wrought on the Western system, where the strikers and their supporters have held up and derailed trains, blocked tracks, destroyed signals, ripped up tracks and destroyed telephones and telegraph wires. The Government has ordered the arrest of a score of strike leaders, and instructions have been issued to the troops to use severe measures wherever occasion offers.

The losses to commerce already are tremendous. Scores of trains have been stalled along the roads, many of these carrying food supplies which even now have become unfit for use.

PROSPERITY OF THE WEST

Reports Received by the Superintendent of Immigration Are Bright.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The weekly reports on western conditions, received by the Superintendent of Immigration, Mr. W. D. Scott, from the agents of the Department of the Interior, in the west, continue to be bright and without complaint of any kind. The weather for the harvest was generally ideal, but since thrashing began there has been much heavy rain and some frost. This, though retarding operations for a few days, did no apparent harm, and everything is again in full swing and progressing rapidly. All grain is in stack, and the crops have turned out well. One thrasher thrashed 1,300 bushels of spring wheat in 4 hours.

In some localities snow fell on September 24, but in spite of this, and the accompanying low temperature, a second crop of grass is growing—splendid feed for the cattle for some time to come.

Harvest hands have been receiving as high as $75 per month and board, and men are still wanted, especially at Indian Head, Lethbridge, Moosemin, Regina, Canora and Gladstone, the wages offered being from $15 and $20 up to $40 and $50 a month, or $2 to $3 per day, and board in most cases. Railwaymen are scarce, the wages paid being $35 and $40.

The markets are good and the prices high, and the farmers find a ready sale for their produce. Wheat varies from 84c to $1 per bushel, oats 40c, slough hay $10 and timothy $20 per ton, flax $2.15, and potatoes 50c per bag.

The transportation facilities are very satisfactory, and elevators are working day and night.

Fuel—both wood and coal—is plentiful. Very few farmers are as yet getting in their winter supply, and will not begin until thrashing is well over. Though prices are high there is no fear of shortage, and prospects are bright for the coming winter.

THREE PERISH IN COLLISION

Imperial Limited Overruns Orders and Crashes Into Stock Train.

A despatch from North Bay says: A remarkable part of the head-on collision on Saturday between the Imperial Limited westbound express and a stock train is the small casualty list, which was confined to three engineers caught in the crash before they had time to leap from their engines. The express received orders at Cartier to meet a stock train at Geneva, three miles west, where no stop is usually made, and the stock train was slowing up preparatory to taking the siding, when the express thundered through Geneva and with a crash piled into the stock train just six minutes after leaving Cartier.

A number of cattle were killed and others injured. In one car every animal perished. Engineer D. S. McLennan of the express was primarily responsible for the accident, and before his death at Sudbury Hospital made a statement, in which he admitted responsibility for overrunning his orders and expressed a desire to take the entire blame.

As the track is of a curving nature west of Geneva the headlights of the approaching trains were hidden, and the express rushed on through the night to certain disaster. Engineer Smith of the stock train was just slowing down to take the siding at Geneva and the brakeman stood upon the step of the engine ready to throw the switch, when he observed the headlight of the coming express and yelled to the engineers to jump for their lives, at the same time making his own escape. Engineer Smith succeeded in clearing his engine before the crash came, but Fireman Percy Vice was caught and killed. Fireman Summers of the express was so seriously injured that he died on Saturday night at Sudbury Hospital.

While the passengers and other members of the train crew were severely shaken up, no one received serious injuries. Traffic was resumed fourteen hours after the accident happened, the track being badly torn up and the wrecked engines and cars being in a shape hard to handle.

TRAIN STRUCK AUTO.

Four Men Instantly Killed at Sebring, Ohio.

A despatch from Sebring, Ohio, says: Charles Albright, aged forty, manager of one of the Sebring Bros' potteries here, and three employees of the firm were all instantly killed on Friday, when a freight car hit their automobile. The other three men killed were Joseph Smedecker and George Frederick, travelling salesman for the potteries, and John Derby, a workman. Albright, driver of the auto, was deaf. He leaves a wife and four children. The others killed were married and leave families.

THE NEW FOOD STANDARDS

Dominion Government Will Probably Promulgate New Standards This Year.

A despatch from Ottawa says: New food standards, prepared during the past year by Mr. Anthony McGill, Chief Analyst of the Inland Revenue Department, assisted by experts working under him, are now before the Cabinet Council, and will probably be promulgated by an Order-in-Council this autumn. The new standards, so far prepared, cover milk and its products, meats and meat products, and grain and grain products.

After a month's advertisement the new standards become law, and as a result of the clearer and more adequate definition of food standards the department will be in a much better position than heretofore to enforce the law respecting the adulteration of foodstuffs and the sale of unwholesome or impure food products. Up to the present one of the greatest handicaps in this respect has been the lack of any definite or adequate legal standards on which to base prosecutions for manufacturing or selling fraudulent goods.

Other standards for medicinal products, etc., are now in the course of preparation.

Hints for Busy Housekeepers.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information
Of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

NEW CANNING RECIPES.

Apple Orange Marmalade.—One-half peck of apples cut in small pieces (do not peel); add enough water to almost cover apples. Boil until soft and drip through jelly bag. Peel three oranges and with a sharp knife remove the white part of the peel. Then run the oranges and yellow peel through food chopper. Add this to the strained apple liquid and measure before boiling. Put over fire to boil thirty minutes and measure same quantity of sugar as measured liquid, and boil hard five minutes, or until it drops thick from a spoon. This quantity makes about twenty glasses.

Apple Butter.—Apple butter made from apple pulp.—Run the apple pulp through a sieve and add sugar and spices to taste. Boil thirty minutes slowly.

Pumpkin Marmalade.—Take one eight pound pumpkin, cut out the ribs, take out seeds, then pare, then cut in thin slices. After all is pared it will weigh about seven pounds. Place in preserving kettle, add five pounds granulated sugar, four lemons sliced thin, five events worth ginger root; mix thoroughly; let it stand over night; in the morning place on the stove, let it boil slowly for two hours and one-half, or until the syrup is thick. Put in glass jars when cool.

Ripe Grapes Marmalade.—Take as many grapes as desired and skin them. Put the pulp on the stove to boil with enough water to cover. Boil until quite soft. Press them through a colander. Now put back on the stove with one quart of juice to one pint of sugar and the skins that you took off the grapes before. Boil until the desired thickness.

Dill Pickles.—Get large pickles and put in clear cold water overnight. Next morning wash and put the following brine over them: Make a brine strong enough to bear an egg, one glassful of vinegar to one gallon of brine. Put pickles in stone crock. Lay pickles, then dill, and so on, until all are used. Dill on top. Pour brine over all. Cover with plate weighted down with stone.

Sweet Corn Relish.—One dozen ears of corn, cut from cobs; one small head of cabbage, four medium onions, three red peppers. Put this all through food chopper. One quart of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of salt, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of tumeric. Boil all one-half hour and seal hot in glass jars.

Sweet Pickles.—Soak medium sized green cucumbers in brine for nine days. Then remove and soak in fresh water for twenty-four hours. Cut in halves and scrape out the seeds. Take a large preserving kettle, put in a layer of pickles, then a layer of grape leaves, and lastly a teaspoonful of powdered alum. Continue in this way until all the pickles are used, and then cover with equal parts of vinegar and water and seal until they look clear. Fill each half of cucumber with seeded raisins and thin slices of lemon, tie halves together, and place in an earthen jar. Make a syrup of one quart of vinegar and two pounds of sugar. Tie one ounce of stick cinnamon and half ounce of whole cloves in a sack and boil in the syrup. Pour over pickles. Pour off and repeat for nine mornings. Leave spices in the jar.

Canning Hint.—The economical housekeeper who feels that she cannot buy new Mason jar covers every time she does any canning will find it a great help to boil her covers with baking soda, allowing a tablespoonful to a quart of cold water, let come to a boil, boil about ten minutes, then scour with sapollo. They will do just as well as new ones, providing you get your jars airtight.

MEATS.

Nut Bread.—Two cups of graham flour, two cups of white flour, one cup of sugar, one cup of chopped English walnuts, one egg, one teaspoon of salt, four heaping teaspoons of baking powder, two cups of sweet milk. Let rise for twenty minutes and bake in a slow oven fifty minutes.

Date Bread.—Two cups of butter, milk, three and one-quarter cups graham flour, one-half cup of cornmeal, two eggs, one teaspoon of granulated sugar, one cup of molasses, one teaspoon of soda, a little salt, one pound of chopped dates sprinkled with the three-quarters cup of graham flour, one-quarter cup of chopped walnuts. This makes two loaves. Have oven quite hot at first, then decrease the heat. It improves the baking to set the bread in hot water for the first one-half hour. Put hot water in a dripping pan and set loaves into it. At the first one-half hour, add more water and bake another one-half hour.

Graham Bread.—Two cups of sour milk or cream, into this stir two level tablespoons baking soda, and let it stand while you mix the following ingredients: Two cups of brown sugar, two eggs, one-half cup white flour, three cups sifted graham flour, one handful of raisins. Add sour milk, mix thoroughly, and bake in bread tin forty-five minutes.

To Raise Bread.—So many times I want just a little more heat to assist in bread raising, especially when the water there is no furnace fire. The hot water bottle came to my rescue and is a wonderful help. Set the pan of bread or rolls on the bag and cover tightly. Before you realize it your bread will be ready for the baking.—H. H.

GRAPE WINE.

Grape Wine.—Remove grapes from stems and put into a jar, sprinkling sugar through them, allowing one pint of sugar to each basket of Concord grapes; let this stand until the pulp becomes absorbed, stirring it occasionally. Then strain and add one quart of water for every two quarts of grape juice, add sugar to taste, one pint of sugar to each basket of grapes is sufficient unless wanted very sweet. Put into a large jar or keg, filling it full that the impurities will work over and run off. Keep in a warm place until it stops working, then strain and bottle and put in a cool place. Very nice and keeps good for years.

Sweet Grape Wine.—Take ripe grapes, wash, dry and carefully pick from the stems. Place a layer of grapes, then a layer of sugar, and so on until the jar is full. Then seal perfectly airtight and set away in a cool place. From time to time turn the jar upside down, as this mixes the sugar and the juice, which gradually oozes from the fruit. In a surprisingly short time one has a jar of rich, sweet wine and one that is a delightful beverage, and one that is excellent for convalescents.

German Recipe.—The second is a German recipe. Wash and stem perfectly sound grapes. Mash them and put on to cook. Add a little water. The less water, the richer the juice will be. Cook until quite soft and strain through a muslin cloth or jelly bag. Put juice again on the fire, adding sugar to taste. Some grapes require more sugar than others. Boil a few minutes, skimming when necessary. While hot, pour into bottles or jars, and seal at once. This will keep all winter without spoiling.

SALADS.

Tomato Salad.—Take large, perfect tomatoes, scald and peel them, then thoroughly chill them. Cut off the stem end, scoop out the inside, and fill the cavity with a mixture of finely minced celery, apples, and horseradish; mix with mayonnaise. The tomato is placed on a perfect lettuce leaf; a rosette of whipped cream is placed on top, slightly salted.

Chicken Salad.—One cooked fowl, two cups celery, four tablespoons vinegar, mayonnaise dressing, lettuce. Hard boiled eggs and olives for decoration. Salt and pepper to taste. Cut the fowl into dice, removing skin and gristle. Mix it with celery, add salt, pepper, and marinate for an hour before using with oil and vinegar. Mix with the mayonnaise dressing and garnish with lettuce, hard boiled eggs and stoned olives or strips of red pepper.

LITTLE HELPS.

To Save Time.—It is an excellent idea when a housekeeper is not blessed with stationary tubs in her laundry to try purchasing a two-inch garden hose and attach it to the faucet. In this way she can let the water run in the tubs and boiler without lifting a drop of water, which gives the laundress extra time which otherwise is wasted.

Dust Mop.—Take old stockings and socks, black or colored, cut them lengthwise into inch strips and put them into your mopstick. Dampen with kerosene and let hang in the open air for a day, when your mop will be ready for use. Shake well each time you use it and occasionally add a little more oil, always letting it air thoroughly.

Summer Parasols.—Now is the time when you are putting away your summer parasols. Make a bag of unbleached muslin, put a drawstring at the top and they hang from hook in closet until spring.

It is not generally known that cold milk given to children causes much trouble during the summer months, as the cold milk entering the stomach is not acted upon by the stomach acids enough to digest it. For this reason, the best plan is to strain milk and add a little cream and sugar and heat it to the boiling point.

Flowers and Frost.—Frosts are occurring in many sections of the country. If you try the following rule you may save your outdoor beds until late in the fall. Lay several broomsticks, leave them rounded at one end and pointed at the other so that they may be easily driven into the earth. Attach strings or wire to the tops of these and at night lay papers or old clothes over the wires. The sticks must be about four inches higher than the plants.

Mothers weaning babies oftentimes find difficulty in securing a food to agree with the little stomach. Try this: Three tablespoonfuls entire wheat flour browned in oven, stirring to secure evenness; mix this with cold water to a smooth paste, then add a pint of boiling water and boil three minutes, stirring, then remove from fire and stir in a rich milk or cream; add a pinch of salt and sweeten to taste. Feed regularly every three or four hours according to age of infant. This food was indorsed by an eminent physician.

IMPALED BY AN ARROW.

Pinned Through the Neck to a Tree, Yet He Survived.

It was in the summer of 1850 that George Walwright and Ben Spencer, each in charge of a train of freight wagons, were headed for the Missouri river to bring supplies back to Colorado. The Indians were very do points. In those days, and these two outfits always camped together for protection. One night they had arranged the camp, with the wagons forming a circle, and everybody but the guards was to be inside. Walwright preferred to sleep in a clump of cottonwoods about a quarter of a mile off, and there he fixed himself with his negro servant as a bodyguard. Neither the camp nor Walwright was disturbed during the night, but early the next morning while Walwright was sitting on the ground with his back to a tree drinking his tin of coffee an arrow from an unseen foe entered his neck at the right of the jugular vein and was driven with such force as to impale the victim to the tree. The negro, believing his master was killed, ran to Spencer's camp and gave the alarm.

Spencer and some of his men rushed over to Walwright. Instead of being dead Walwright was not even seriously injured. Spencer cut the arrow off close to the point of entrance and then gently drew Walwright's head forward until he was released. The victim suffered but little inconvenience from the wound, and by the time the trip was completed it was entirely healed.—Los Angeles Times.

THE WAY OF THE SWISS.

Foreigners Regarded as Egyptians and Treated Accordingly.

A foreign resident in Switzerland was fined 10 francs because his little girl had plucked three buttercups growing on a piece of land on which she and some half dozen Swiss children had for years been accustomed to play. The land had recently changed hands, and its new owner had put up a notice forbidding the plucking of flowers. A passing gendarme had found the children flagrant delicto and had forthwith instituted proceedings against the little foreigner, while letting the little natives go scot free. The child's father appealed against the sentence and by dint of hard fighting, which entailed, of course, expense, forced the higher court to reduce the fine from 10 francs to 3-1 e., 1 franc for each buttercup.

When I tried to learn the whys and wherefores of this case I was told by a Swiss that one-half of every fine levied goes to the gendarme who reports the offense for which it is levied, and also that Swiss gendarmes cannot fairly be expected to be quite so alert in taking proceedings against their own country people as against foreigners.

Further, I was told by an American that in Switzerland all foreigners rank as Egyptians and that the one Scriptural injunction that is faithfully obeyed there is that which ordains that Egyptians shall be spoiled.—From "The Latter Day Swiss" in Cornhill Magazine.

DeStyle.—"Had you accepted him he probably wouldn't be worth 30 cents to-day."

Beaten to a Mummy.

Until pretty late in the eighteenth century mummies entered into a great variety of drugs, balms and other medicaments. As the genuine mummy was then expensive, recipes were given by many ancient writers for converting human flesh into mummy. Usually only certain portions of the body were used, and these were beaten, dried, macerated and spiced out of all likeness to their natural condition, hence "beaten to a mummy." Numerous allusions are made to the practice in ancient literature, and in an old play, "Bird in a Cage," are the directions, "Make mummy of my flesh and sell me to the apothecaries."

A Famous Opal.

The most famous opal in history was that which was worn in a ring by the Roman senator Noliun in the day of the triumvirate. Its size equaled that of a medium sized hazelnut, yet its beauty and brilliancy rendered it a marvel among the dilettanti of Rome, especially when it was known that the goldsmiths and money changers had set its value at $1,000,000. Mark Antony made overtures to Noliun for its purchase, intending, it is thought, to present it to Cleopatra, but the senator refused to part with it and for fear that it would be taken from him by sheer force sought safety in flight. Here history loses all trace of the famous gem, there being no record of its transference from Noliun to any of his family.

At a Wedding Breakfast.

After a marriage recently the bridal party partook of a sumptuous breakfast, toward the end of which a young brother of the bride got up and solemnly, raising his glass: "Ladies and gentlemen, I have to propose a toast, which, however, must be drunk standing. Please take your glasses and rise up."

"The guests, although somewhat bewildered, did so."

"Now," said the young scapegrace, "if you will remain standing for a few minutes I'll find out who has been sitting on my new hat."—London Tit-Bits.

Russia.

Russia did not break into European history until comparatively recent times. Rurik, a Varenian chief, seems to have been the first to establish a government about 862. Rurik's descendants ruled amid many ups and downs till 1698, at which time the real history of the country may be said to begin. With the solitary exception of the United States of America, the progress of Russia under Peter the Great and Catherine II. is unequalled for rapidity in the history of the world.

Hakon of Norway Served Severe Marine Apprenticeship.

A sailor-king in every sense of the term is King Hakon of Norway, who recently celebrated his thirty-eighth birthday, for he served a severe marine apprenticeship in his youth. In the Danish navy cadets during the first period of their service have the same work, rations and quarters as ordinary seamen. So the King, during his first nine months on the Danish training ship Dronning Louise, had to take his turn in waiting on his messmates and in washing up the dishes after meals. This rough training has proved a valuable asset in his government of a democratic race, and King Hakon has been popular with his people from the first days of his reign.

Dr. Crippen Convicted

Sentenced to be Hung, Nov. 8th

In the arrest, trial and condemnation of Dr. Crippen for the murder of his wife, the British authorities have again given an example to the world of justice moving with dignity, celerity and certitude. The authorities in England and here are to be congratulated on the apprehension and condemnation of this cold-blooded, smiling villain. It is a wholesome thing to bring such criminals to a speedy answer for thus offending against the laws of God and man, and it is best for society and the criminal himself that the interval between the sentence and the execution should give sufficient time for repentance, but should not be so long as to raise false hopes of reprieve or to keep the public mind excited over and over again with the fate of a murderer and the details of his foul crime.

When the jury in the Dr. Crippen case returned a verdict of "Guilty" on Saturday, Lord Chief Justice Alverstone asked the physician if he had anything to say. Crippen replied in a low voice: "I still profess my innocence."

Lord Alverstone then donned the black cap that has rested near him during the trial and pronounced sentence of death.

Addressing the condemned man, Lord Alverstone said:

"You have been convicted on evidence which can leave no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that you cruelly murdered your wife and then mutilated her body."

"I advise you to entertain no hope that you will escape the consequence of your crime. I implore you to make your peace with Almighty God."

When Lord Alverstone concluded, a policeman stepped forward, and in the hush that had fallen over the court room, led Crippen from the dock.

Crippen will be hanged on November 8th.

Lord Alverstone, in his summing up of the case, described Crippen as an extraordinary man, whether guilty or innocent. If guilty he had covered up a ghastly crime in a ghastly way, and it was believed in a most brutal and callous manner. If he was innocent it was impossible to fathom his mind, as he was absolutely indifferent to the charge of murder. He had taken no step whatever to prove his innocence. Crippen, the Justice declared, was undoubtedly a liar and had lived an immoral life, but, he added, the jury could not convict the defendant on that score. It must be quite convinced that the human parts found were from the body of Belle Elmore, and that her death was caused by a wilful act of the prisoner.

He Didn't Have To

There are so many people in the world who, according to their own story, don't have to. They don't have to do this and they don't have to do that, and it must be very pleasant indeed, for I notice that most of us have got to. We have to.

The sooner folks learn that they have to, the better. Some preachers, for instance, don't have to preach this or the other. They are wrong; they have to. There is not a walk in life where the man who doesn't have to is not to be feared.

Little Bobby at the breakfast table declares he don't have to eat this or that. The day will come when he will have to eat that sort of stuff or die. He don't have to wear the clothes his mother buys for him. Ten years after his mother has ceased buying clothes for him he will not be able to buy clothes for himself.

The girl who don't have to marry a young farmer or mechanic frequently finds out that she has to marry any old proposition that comes along and with it, it seems to me that the nicest folks I meet are the "have to" people.

They have to work, they have to live in cute little homes, they have to surround themselves with all kinds of interesting make-shifts. People who don't have to are unendurable.

Yonder man is plowing that field because he has to. This man is digging a sewer because he has to, and they are the only men in sight who are worth knowing.—THE KHAN in Toronto Star.

The Death of the Flowers

The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year Of wailing winds and naked woods, and meadows brown and bare.

Heaped in the hollows of the grove, the autumn leaves lie dead;
They rustle to the eddying gust and to the rabbit's tread.

The robin and the wren are flown, and from the shrubs the jay
And from the wood-top calls the crow through all the gloomy day.

Where are the flowers, the fair young flowers, that lately sprang and stood In brighter light and softer airs, a beautiful sisterhood?

Alas! they all are in their graves: the gentle race of flowers Are lying in their lovely beds with the fair and good of our—

The rain is falling where they lie, but the cold November rain Calls not from out the gloomy earth, the lovely ones again.

The wind-flower and the violet, they perished long ago,
And the briar-rose and the orchis died
amid the summer glow;

But on the hills the golden-rod, and the
aster in the wood,
And the yellow sun-flower by the brook in autumn beauty stood.

Till fell the frost from the clear, heaven,
as falls the plague on men,
And the brightness of their smile was gone from upland, glade and glen.

And now, when comes the calm, mild day,
as still such days will come,
To call the squirrel and the bee from out their winter home;

When the sound of the dropping nuts is heard though all the trees are still,
And twine in the smoky light the waters of the rill,

The south wind searches for the flowers whose fragrance late he bore,
And sighs to find them in the wood and by the stream no more.

And then I think of one, who in her youthful beauty died,
The fair meek blossom that grew up and faded by my side:

In the cold moist earth we laid her, when
the forest cast her leaf,
And we wept that one so lovely should have a life so brief;

Yet not unmet it was that one like that young friend of ours,
So gentle and so beautiful should perish with the flowers.

On October 11th, Mrs. John Runnals passed peacefully from this earth to the great beyond. She had been suffering for several months with lung trouble and death came to her as a happy release.

The deceased was a devout christian and her gentle amiable disposition made her beloved by all her neighbors. A husband, two sons, a mother—Mrs. John Jones—and a brother survive her. Service was held at her house by her pastor, Rev. J. E. Moore, his sermon being from the text "Because I live ye shall live also."

She was borne to her last resting place in the family burying plot by Messrs. Vance, George Sine, C. B. McGuire, F. C. Ketcheson, Wm. and Chas. McMaster, followed by a large concourse of sympathizing friends.

The work of remodeling our Town Hall is in progress, and the building is already much improved in appearance. Mrs. McCormick and son of Belleville are at the home of her brother, Mr. A. Runnals.

Miss M. Holcombe has left for Tacoma. She was accompanied by Buffalo by her mother and sister who will spend a week with relatives there.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Runnals of Prescott, Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson of Menie and Mr. and Mrs. Manson Mc Connell attended the funeral of the late Mrs. John Runnals.

Fire broke out at an early hour on Saturday in a dwelling in Tweed, owned and occupied by Joseph Murphy. The family were all asleep, and were nearly suffocated with smoke, but were brought out safely. The Tweed fire brigade confined the fire to the kitchen, but the house was badly damaged. The loss is covered by insurance.

It is stated that Belleville will have an up-to-date street railway in the near future. Some time ago a syndicate of local gentlemen obtained a charter from the Government to operate a street railway service in Belleville. It is reported now in well-informed circles that the Electric Power Company, Ltd., has taken over the charter, or are about to do so, with the object of building and operating a line.

CRUISER NIOBE WELCOMED

Flagship of New Canadian Navy Arrives at Halifax.

A despatch from Halifax, N. S., says: "Welcome then and a thousand welcomes in the name of the Canadian Government, in that of every loyal and truly patriotic citizen of Canada, in that of the rising generation, and finally in that of the Empire in whose world-girdling belt Canada is the bright and precious buckle," were the words with which Hon. L. P. Brodeur concluded a speech on the quarter-deck of the cruiser Niobe, commanded by Capt. Macdonald, a British Columbian, an hour after she anchored in Halifax harbor on Friday, and Rear-Admiral Kingsmill had hoisted his flag at the mast-head. "H.M.C.S." the initials now read, "H.M.C.S." the new letter standing for "Canadian." The Niobe is a Canadian warship, and the letter may be significant of a change compared with the old order of things. There was a display of hunting all over the city

TWO-POWER NAVY NEEDED

Former Premier Urges Necessity for Absolute Safety in Capital Ships

A despatch from London says: Mr. A. J. Balfour, speaking at Glasgow, on Wednesday, dealt with Imperial defence and said: "These Islands are strategically the gate of the defence of the Empire. He would resist the temptation to deal with the question of how far the responsibility for the protection of the Empire should be shared by the self-governing colonies. The initiative in this respect must come from them. Mr. Balfour referred to the relative strength of Britain and the other powers in 1905 and 1910. Never in any other period of British naval history had there been such a change. He urged the necessity for absolute national safety in capital ships, and said the two-power standard was more necessary now than ever. Other countries could build as fast as Britain. The Admiralty was ill-informed with regard to what the nations were doing it might at any moment be confronted with the utmost peril without warning. Britain could no longer wait and see what other countries were doing, but must see to it that they did not get ahead.

BRITAIN'S NAVAL MARGIN.

A despatch from London says: Mr. Reginald McKenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking at Portsmouth on Thursday night, said Mr. Balfour's naval jeremiads always "synchronized with his followers' demands for lead in tariff reform. He considered that in first-class battleships Britain more than maintained the two-power standard, and in first-class cruisers the superiority was still more marked. Never had the margin of superiority been so high in times of peace. Mr. McKenna also denied the correctness of Mr. Balfour's figures respecting the number of German and British Dreadnoughts in 1913.

ROGER HART'S CASE.

Winnipeg Man Went Insane Soon After His Marriage.

A despatch from Prince Albert, Sask., says: Married on Saturday and in court on Monday for examination as to his mental condition, Roger Hart, plasterer, presents one of the most unusual cases ever known in this city. Hart worked here for eight years. He sent for a fair competency. He sent for a girl in England, with whom he corresponded regularly, and married her on arrival last Saturday. On Sunday Hart was picked up on the street in an unconscious state, and when revived seemed to be laboring under the delusion that he was dead and in hades, expiating some dreadful crime. When brought into court he was catatonic, and fell to the floor, stiff as a board. Doctors are completely at sea as to what to do with the unfortunate man. Friends say he suffered from insomnia for weeks before his marriage.

FOUR YEARS IN PRISON.

Mrs. Pankhurst Was Sentenced for Shoplifting.

A despatch from Buffalo says: The tears of Mrs. Winifred Pankhurst and the plea of her lawyer that she be spared for the sake of her children were of no avail when she was arraigned on Wednesday before Judge Taylor in County Court for sentence on the charge of shoplifting. Mrs. Pankhurst was sentenced to serve four years in State's Prison at Auburn, N. Y. Mrs. Pankhurst said that she was born in South Wales 41 years ago. She admitted that she was convicted recently in Toronto on a charge of petit larceny. When her lawyer made reference to her two children, a boy ten years old and a girl of fourteen, she sobbed. The Buffalo police declare she is one of the shrewdest shoplifters that ever operated in this city.

APPLE CROP OF NOVA SCOTIA

Not More Than Fifteen Per Cent. Will be Available for Export

A despatch from Halifax, N. S. says: The apple crop of Nova Scotia will be a worse failure than was at first anticipated, and it looks now as if there would not be available for export more than fifteen per cent. of the average. The whole fruit region is in the same condition of barren trees, and farmers whose orchards yield an average of 1,000 barrels, but this year will have only 100; are the rule and not the exception. The counties of Kings, Annapolis, and Hants comprise this fruit-growing region, and the condition of failure is general in all three districts. The export of apples to Britain last year from Nova Scotia was about 700,000 barrels. At the most, this year it will reach 170,000 barrels. The failure of the apple crop is not only a serious thing for the orchardists, but it is a blow at the traffic of the Dominion Atlantic railway, which hauls the whole crop, and steamship lines from this port. The steamer Kanawha is now loading 19,000 barrels at this port for London.

CRIPPEN FOUND GUILTY.

Convicted of Murdering His Wife in London.

A despatch from London says: After considering the evidence for just thirty minutes on Saturday the jury at the New Bailey returned a verdict of murder against Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, who was accused of killing his wife, Belle Elmore. Lord Alverstone sentenced the prisoner to death, the day fixed being November 15. The condemned man's counsel have signified their intention of appealing the verdict, and this appeal will probably stay the execution. As Crippen left the dock he was supported by a warder; his face was blanched and he was trembling in every limb. Later in the evening he suffered from severe fainting spells, and special medical aid was summoned to Brixton jail to treat him. He was greatly depressed over his condition and the imposition of the death penalty.

LINK OCEANS IN 3 YEARS.

G. T. P. President Says Trains will Cross Continent.

A despatch from St. John, N. B., says: C. M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, at the banquet given in his honor by the St. John Board of Trade on Thursday night, declared that he believed trains would be running over the entire road from Atlantic to Pacific within three years. "It will be much sooner than you realize," he said. He added that the port of St. John would become one of the very best on the Atlantic coast, but warned the people that work of development must be started on a greater scale without delay if facilities are to be provided for all the freight that will come here when the Grand Trunk Pacific gets into operation.

RELICS OF THE REVOLUTION

Brought to Light Again by Government Dredge.

A despatch from St. John's Quebec, says: The Government dredge, while working in front of the officers' quarters here to-day clearing away the remains of the Royal Sauvage, which was sunk during the revolution, brought up a cannon, two large axes, and several smaller articles, such as buttons, coins, etc. It is expected more will be recovered.

PEAT FUEL IS A SUCCESS

First Lot of 500 Tons Manufactured by Government Sells Readily

A despatch from Ottawa says: The experiment made by the Mines Department during the past month of placing on the local market 500 tons of peat manufactured into domestic fuel at the Government experimental plant at Alfred, a few miles east of Ottawa, has proved a great success. The whole supply offered was sold within a few days at $3.25 a ton, and since then there has been a deluge of orders for further supplies. There is a general consensus of opinion among those who have used the new fuel that it is cheaper and more satisfactory than coal. The results of the first year's operation of the Government plant at Alfred indicate that there is an immense field for commercial exploitation in developing the very large peat deposits scattered throughout central and northern Canada.

Bi-Lingual Schools

Ontario has hitherto prided itself upon the excellence of its educational system, and on the presumed fact that no child within its boundaries left the public or separate schools without a sufficient measure of education for at least the ordinary purposes of life. Bishop Fallon has placed a very different complexion on this complacent belief, so far as certain French-Canadian districts are concerned. Inefficiency he maintains, prevails in the separate schools, and the bi-lingual schools are worse. Illiteracy is rampant among children from 11 to 15 years of age. Many cannot either read or write. Responsibility for this appalling condition in the most progressive province of the Dominion Bishop Fallon says, rests not on the children or the teachers but on the system. The issue he raises is the most serious character, and the government cannot ignore the strong and clear indictment he has presented. Education is not a matter that should divide English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians, nor is it a matter on which one province can be allowed to dictate to another. Ontario is an English-speaking province, and it recognizes that in order to afford that equality of opportunity which is a cardinal principle to every democratic state, every child that leaves its schools should have a competent knowledge of the language that is spoken by 100,000,000 on this continent.

No intelligent man will question the value of knowing more than one language. But it is better to know one properly than to know none at all, or imperfectly. Bi-lingual schools do not teach either language, much less both, and cannot be tolerated in Ontario, however violent may be the protest elsewhere. The United States school system and the constitutional rule that the English language must be used in all courts of law and representative assemblies has been of incalculable importance in assimilating its varied racial elements. The Dominion cannot assume that position and its English-speaking people have no desire to restrict the rights and privileges of their French fellow citizens. But the individual provinces, subject to the provisions of the Federation Act regarding separate schools, are under no compulsion to allow their communities to be divided into two separate entities divided by differences in language. Bishop Fallon insists that it is not a contest between English-speaking and French-speaking Catholics, neither is it one between English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians. But the distinctive characteristics of the Ontario Educational system must be preserved, and these rest on the fact that Ontario is, and must remain an English-speaking province. The interests of the province, and the interests of the children of the province are identical, and both require that no child shall leave the state schools, whether public or separate, without a sufficient knowledge of the English language. If the bi-lingual schools cannot effect that result they must give place to a better system that will. It ought not to be impossible to secure that along with this if proper provision is afforded for those children who are also desired to receive French teaching.

Albert College, Belleville, is in a prosperous state, and cannot accommodate all the students who wish to attend. An enlargement is to be made in the near future. Rev. Principal Dyer and Preceptor Gardner have each completed a quarter of a century in their positions in the college, and their services were acknowledged by the presentation to each of a purse of gold, and their life size portraits are to adorn the walls of the college.

The Anglican Synod, in Session at Victoria, B.C., has passed the following resolution: "This Synod records its conviction that a text-book of Bible knowledge be compiled and put forth for the use of public schools of the Province; also that having in view the incentive to excessive drinking which arises from the treating at bars of saloons and hotels, this synod declares itself in favor of total prohibition by law of the treating system."

Mr. E. J. Chamberlain General Manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, states, that while the G.T.P. will not be finished till 1913, the work will be done within the estimates of cost. The relaxation of immigration regulations has operated to some extent to relieve the labor situation, but many more men are needed for the mountain section. There are now 4,500 laborers engaged in it. There should be 8,000 he says. Mr. Chamberlain states that estimates of the wheat crop vary from 80,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels. The G.T.P. expects to carry 10,000,000 bushels of it. A thousand miles of G.T.P. railway is now in operation and 800 miles of branch lines are under contract.

Six billion board feet of lumber valued at about $15,000,000 were destroyed in the recent forest fire in the National forests at Montana, and Northern Idaho. The total area burned over in this one district was put at 1,250,000 acres. Miss Ethel Claire LeNeve, the young girl who figured so inconspicuously in the Crippen romance, was acquitted after 22 minutes deliberation by the jury. The speedy and favorable verdict was a great surprise, for following the sentence to death of Dr. Crippen it was expected that Miss LeNeve would receive a brief prison sentence.

NEW AIR WIZARD.

Inventor of the Gyroplane Promises Wonderful Things.

The incorporation of an aerial navigation company at St. Louis has revealed plans for a commercial passenger airplane that rivals the wildest dreams of Jules Verne. Officials of the company declare that within a year they will have a ship that will carry a hundred passengers in a forty mile wind and at a speed of 100 miles an hour.

The machine is the invention of J. W. Oman, formerly of San Antonio, Texas, but at present at St. Louis. One is in process of construction in the shops of the inventor at St. Louis. The inventor claims that his ship can start either from the land or water. He declares it will be launched in the manner of an aeroplane.

The new airship is called a gyroplane, so named from the fact that it is a combination of a gyroscop, the helicopter and the aeroplane. Its promoters say it can be built in any size from a two-man runabout or a seven passenger touring car to a monster of the air that will carry fifty or a hundred passengers.

"A thirty or forty mile breeze would be a help rather than a hindrance to our machine," said the inventor the other day. "We will maintain absolute equilibrium in anything short of a cyclone. The usual obstacles that prevent the flight of an ordinary airplane will be as nothing to this machine of ours."

It is planned to construct machines that will maintain a regular service between cities and states and even countries.

The gyroscop and the helicopter are familiar principles in heavier than air navigation, but never before have they been applied in the manner employed by Oman. The model of his ship is fitted with four huge propellers, twelve feet in diameter, which may be used in turn for driving the machine from the ground or carrying it through the air.

The machine has been inspected by Government engineers and pronounced superior to all others, it is declared. Ten patents have been granted, covering almost every feature of the machine. The machine is to be constructed entirely of aluminum, and macadamite and besides carrying four propellers is fitted with two engines.

The inventor asserts the machine can be made to stand still at one spot in the air for an indefinite time. "We could drop a thousand bombs on a warship from a height of two miles without moving a foot," he declared. Oman has studied aerial navigation twenty years.

"Natural Life."

A poisoner in a western state has been sentenced to imprisonment, as the news dispatches put it, "for the rest of his natural life." That phrase "natural life" bothers some people, who wonder if the law recognizes any "unnatural life." It does not, but the old common law did recognize an unnatural death as well as a natural one. When a man or woman takes the monastic vow people still speak of it as "leaving the world." In medieval times that was considered a form of death, and the phrase "natural life" came into use to describe an existence terminated by the grave, not by the convent or the abbey.

Antiquity of Gold Leaf.

The origin of the gold leaf, like the first use of gold itself, is lost in the mists of antiquity. It is found, for example, in connection with the most ancient known mummies, having been used for covering teeth, tongue, skin, etc. Sometimes it is also found on the coffins. Gold leaf was also used on the tombs and monuments of ancient Egypt. The process of making gold leaf has thus been known since the eighth century B.C. In the eleventh century it seems to have attained as high a degree of perfection as today. The gold leaf on some ancient Grecian pottery indeed is as thin as that now used.

The Wolf's Den.

One of the most gruesome among animal homes is the wolf's den. This is simply a hole dug in the side of a bank or a small natural cave, generally situated on the sunny side of a ridge and almost hidden by bushes and loose boulders. Here the wolf lies snug. In and about his doorway lie the remains of past feasts, which, coupled with his own odor, make the wolf's den a not very inviting place. Nevertheless there is something so dread and mysterious about this soft footed marauder that it even lends a fascination to his home.

Windmills.

Holland is known to all the world as the land of windmills, but very few people know that the windmill did not belong to Europe in the first place, but originated among the Sarracens. There is, it is believed, no instance of a windmill being used in Europe until the time of the crusades. In a typical wind driven flour mill in Asia Minor the planes of the wind wheel are made of a fabric and catch the wind as do the sails of a sailing ship.

A Hard Law.

A traveler getting outside St. Petersburg discovered when he tried to enter the city that he had left his passport in the bedroom of his hotel. The guards refused to let him pass and refused to send for the passport. "According to you," said he, "the only thing for me to do is to throw myself in the Neva." "No," said the sentry, "suicide in Russia is strictly against the law."

His Standard.

A shoe drummer alighted from the train at Farville and looked up and down the street. Presently Yick Lee came along with a bundle of soiled laundry, and the drummer hailed him with: "John, how much of a place is this here town of Farville?" "Sixty or seventy minutes," replied the Chinaman.

IDLENESS AND POVERTY

THEY ARE RESULTS OF YEARS OF MISRULE IN COREA.

The monotony and decay that characterize Korean towns are outcome of corruption that dates away back into Middle Ages—Japanese and their methods are not welcome, but are inevitable.

The isolation which earned for Korea the name of the Hermit Kingdom has also preserved its peculiar customs unchanged. In the costumes of the people, which seem more suitable for a comic opera than practical use, the primitive construction of houses and the national customs Korea today is practically the Korea of a thousand years ago.

Today the traveler who crosses from Japan may land at the harbor of Fusan, because it has been selected as the railroad center of the country by the Japanese. The first impression upon landing is the absolute lack of any color. Southern Korea is practically destitute of trees. Its forests were chopped down, the story goes, in order the more easily to do away with the country's former scourge, the tiger; more probably the reason was that the people needed wood and with typical improvidence forgot to plan for the future.

The impression of the country on nearing land is therefore of darkness, the town itself adding only the gleaming white of its steeply sided streets, and costumes equally white in effect if not too closely examined, for the Koreans, men and women alike, save those of the upper classes, wear curious white cotton garments consisting of long baggy trousers and a long coat of simple cut that closes with a bow near the right shoulder. For the married men the effect is made even more ridiculous by a black hat, narrow of brim and high of crown, under which their long hair must be gathered in a knot.

The appearance of Korean towns and cities, even of Seoul, the capital, is monotonous and depressing even the impression of universal and complete poverty, filth and decay has worn off. For though social distinctions are said to be as strict in this country as they are in others they have to outward expression in the mode of living, for with the exception of court and king the nation lives in mud huts, usually of two rooms, covered with straw roofs and opening in the back on small yards or compounds surrounded by mud walls of varying but formidable height.

Sanitation in spite of the efforts of the religious missions and the Japanese is practically non-existent; the heating in winter is done in a kang, a stove similar to that of the Chinese, in which the fire is made underneath the stone floor. It gives no warmth at all or makes the room unendurably hot, besides being very dangerous. The chimney is a hole in the side of the house near the ground.

In the compound domestic animals are kept if the family possesses any, and in one corner of the yard, into the ground are the kimchi jars. Kimchi is the universal winter food, a preparation of cabbage, tomatoes, onions and red peppers tightly packed, covered with straw and set aside to ferment in the middle of the street. Everywhere is indescribable filth and calm acceptance of it.

The street picture increases the impression of a hopeless poverty against which the people have ceased to struggle. There is little activity. A few ox-drawn carts go slowly lumbering by and occasional rickshaws carrying enormous loads on their backs. In Korea man is the commonest beast of burden.

The majority of the population in various states of dress and undress are stretched out in the little spots of shade, sleeping, laughing or teasing one another. Idleness and idleness here and there, but as a rule graceful lethargy prevails. Naked children play in the dirty sewer water, which usually runs through a ditch in the middle of the street. Everywhere is indescribable filth and calm acceptance of it.

The reason commonly given for the condition of this pauper kingdom is the official corruption, which is as old as the nation and which has become honorable. From the king to the lowest man in authority stealing or squeezing as it is called in the east, was the common means of existence, openly carried on. If any citizen built a house, owned property, or showed other indication of means he or one of his relatives was promptly imprisoned and the family was forced to ransom him.

What the official stole from the people the courtier took from his inferior and the king helped himself universally. When the people had nothing left the king sold to wealthy nobles the right to coin money, which they made the most of by using any inferior metal and by continuing even after the right had expired. The country was soon so full of debased coins that at one point there were quotations current in 1901 for (1) Government nickels; (2) first-class counterfeit; (3) medium class counterfeit; and (4) counterfeit as poor as to be passable only after dark.

The result of this system was that all manner of work was discouraged until labor fell into discredit. Why amass wealth that would surely be seized? One class copied the lesson of idleness from its superiors with the result that even the poorest and lowliest citizen considered labor beneath him.

The Koreans can make no effective opposition to the Japanese, for poverty, lack of arms and organization make their efforts useless against the large and well-armed Japanese army, against Japan's superiority as a race and Japanese advantage in equipment and training in matters political and social.

Grass Matches. A stiff grass which is grown abundantly in India is used for sticks in making matches in that country.

CARRIED OFF BY A LION.

Thrilling Experience of a Ranger in the Transvaal.

Two men at least have given accounts of their sensations when they were carried off by lions—the great explorer Livingstone and a man named Wolhuter, a ranger of game preserves in the Transvaal. Wolhuter's adventure is not secondary in interest to Livingstone's experience. His story, which was attested by the certificate of the magistrate of the district, was substantially as follows:

He was riding along a Kaif path about an hour after sunset. It had been a long march, and he had pushed ahead of his companions. His dog barked at something, and a moment later Wolhuter saw a lion crouching close to him on the right hand side. The ranger turned his horse sharply, a circumstance that no doubt caused the lion to miss the spring.

Wolhuter was unseated. At the same moment he saw another lion coming from the opposite direction. The horse rushed off, with the first lion in pursuit, and the second lion picked Wolhuter up almost before he touched the ground and gripped him by the right shoulder in such a position that he was face up, with his legs and body dragging underneath the beast. The lion trotted down the path, uttering a loud, growling, purring noise.

Wolhuter's sensations were not those of Livingstone, who said he was in a state of apathy, with entire absence of pain during the time he was under the lion's paw. The game ranger suffered terribly, both mentally and physically, and saw no possible way of escape. The lion took him nearly 200 yards.

Suddenly Wolhuter brought him to his sheath knife, which he carried in his belt behind his right hip. On reaching a large tree with overhanging roots the lion stopped, whereupon Wolhuter stabbed him twice in the side with his left hand. It was ascertained afterward that the first stab touched the bottom of the heart and that the second one slit it down for some distance.

The lion immediately dropped Wolhuter, and again the game ranger struck him, this time in the throat, severing an artery.

The lion jumped back and stood facing him, growling. Wolhuter scrambled to his feet, shouting at the top of his lungs. He expected the beast to come at him again, but it did not. Instead, it turned slowly and, still growling, went a few paces. Soon its growls turned to moans. These, in turn, ceased, and the ranger knew that the beast was then dead.

Wolhuter got up the tree as fast as his injured arm would permit, and hardly was he seated when the first lion, which had been after the horse, came back on the trail of blood. By this time the plucky ranger was so faint that he tied himself to the tree to prevent himself from falling off.

He was found by his companions, who took him to a place of safety. The lion he had killed was an old male, and the weapon used was an ordinary sheath knife.—New York Tribune.

Peculiarities of Lichens.

The lichen is remarkable for the great age to which it lives, there being good grounds for believing that the plants endure for 100 years. Their growth is exceedingly slow, almost beyond belief, indicating that only a little nourishment is necessary to keep them alive. In a dry time they have the power to suspend growth altogether, renewing it again at the fall of rain. This peculiarity alone is enough to make the lichen a vegetable wonder, as it is a property possessed by no other species of plant. Another interesting fact about lichens is that they grow only where the air is free from dust and smoke. They may be said to be a sure indication of the purity of the air, as they are never found growing in cities and towns where the atmosphere is impregnated with dust, soot, smoke and other impurities.

Tingling Ears. If your ears burn, people say, some one is talking about you. This is very old, for Pliny says, "When our ears do glow and tingle some do talk of us in our absence." Shakespeare in "Much Ado About Nothing" makes Beatrice say to Ursula and Hero, who had been talking of her, "What life is in mine ears!" Sir Thomas Browne ascribes this to the superstition of guardian angels, who touch the right ear if the talk is favorable and the left if otherwise. This is done to cheer or warn.

One ear tingles, some there be That are snarling now at me!

The Advice Gaeleer. "When a man asks me for advice," said the good natured person, "I always find myself getting into a discussion." "Well," replied Mr. Sirius Barker, "most of us ask for advice because we would rather argue than work."—Washington Star.

Unpeeled. Mr. Recentmarrie (who has plunged a spoon into dish preparatory to helping to the pudding)—Why, Mary, I feel some hard, smooth, round things in the dish. I wonder what they can be. Mrs. Recentmarrie—Why, they're eggs, John; there are six, just as the recipe says.—Chicago News.

Stupid People. Traveler—Haven't you a time table? Station Agent—We used to have one until the people began to think the trains were supposed to keep to it.—Fleeting Blitzer.

Happiness is reflective, like the light of heaven.—Irvine.

SCENE OF AMAZING ACTIVITY.

Whole Chinese Empire Going In For Various Forms of Education.

During the last year or two the Chinese have taken up wireless telegraphy with especial earnestness. State writers have returned from the United States not long ago after the third visit of six months' duration to the Chinese empire in the last ten years. Two hundred men are studying in a school established by the Government especially for the purpose. There are many wireless stations at Tibet. And even the small Chinese river gunboats are equipped with wireless. The whole empire today, in short, is a scene of amazing military and educational activity. Wherever I went on the trains I saw military camps, in which part of the 5,000,000 army which China is mobilizing, is being trained. There are military camps, in which thousands of Chinese are being trained. There are railroad schools, telegraph schools, postoffice schools, custom house schools, normal schools, laboratories, museums and libraries. The teachers in these schools are partly foreign, but chiefly native. All these schools have recently been established by the Imperial Government itself to further the national desire for being up to date. The Chinese admire the English-speaking races, and they are particularly anxious to see some of our fellow-countrymen.

In spite of the fact that the Imperial Government is giving the Chinese every possible concession in the way of education, the country is still being governed under a regency. China's last three monarchs have been babies when they first came to the throne. The Chinese feel that they are passing through a critical period of their history, and that they need especially now a full-grown man to govern them. For this reason, what might be called China's "anti-baby" feeling is very strong.

Making Cigarette Paper.

Rice paper, with which cigarettes are made, has nothing to do with rice, but is made from the membranes of the breadfruit tree, or, more commonly, of fine, new trimmings of flax and hemp. France makes cigarette papers for the whole world, the output of Austria and Italy being insignificant.

So light is this paper that 500 of the tiny sheets go to the making of one cigarette. They are perfectly combustible, and being rolled with tobacco they are analyzed to prove that they are free from deleterious ingredients and that they contain nothing but the purest paper fiber.

Only new material—flax and hemp trimmings—is used, and these are thoroughly purified. Chopped machinery into minute particles, they are well mixed by a revolving fan, and then reduced almost to dust. This is placed in a solution of lime and soda.

In order that every foreign substance may be eliminated it undergoes a thorough washing process, the water being obtained from artesian wells sunk for the purpose. The pulp is then again crushed and rolled out into paper. This is of a grayish tinge and the pure white of the finished leaf is obtained by an electric process, which also cleanses it of all possible impurities.

Amended It.

When King George was Prince of Wales one of his body servants was once trying to explain to Sir Arthur Bigge some incident that had taken place.

"Me and the prince"—he began, when Sir Arthur pulled him up. "You should say 'the prince and I,'" he observed. The man looked at him for a moment and then said: "I beg pardon, sir, but I did not know you were there at all. However, you and me are partners in this. Sir Arthur was compelled to laugh at this and, after another attempt to explain to the man how the story should be told, was content to let him tell it in his own fashion.—Pearson's Weekly.

Naming the Baby.

Down in Princeton there is a baby four months old who has not yet been christened. It has worried the friends of the parents, for they are anxious to know what the child is to be called. The other day a friend of the father stopped by and said:

"Named the baby yet?" "No, not yet," was the answer. "Well, why don't you name him?" "What's the use? He's red-headed, isn't he?"

"But what difference does that make?" "All the difference in the world. I wouldn't do us any good to name him. The kids wouldn't call him by it any how."

Curved Bridges of Japan.

The curved bridges of Japan are of three kinds—first, those known as torii, which are arches in the center suggesting a pair of spectacles; second, the camel back bridges, which go up very high indeed; third, the ordinary one arch, semicircular bridges. The reason the Japanese so often have curved bridges is that they know modern times they could not build them flat, and even to-day there is no key-stone to the Japanese arches. They are generally familiar with the key-stone. A great many of two kinds of bridges—the camel back and the high curved bridges—are found in the palace grounds at Peking, in China.

A Tragedy.

"Deceiver!" he hissed. "I hate you!" "Hate me!" gasped her affianced. "Why, it was only yesterday you said you loved every hair on my head." "Yes, but not every hair on your shoulder!" she retorted as she held up a bit of golden evidence.

The Diamond.

While the diamond is the hardest substance known, it is also brittle and may be crushed by a blow. But if it is placed between two hard new faces in a hydraulic press and a slowly accelerating pressure applied the hard steel will become indented.

THE THIRD REPUBLIC.

France's Latest Form of Government Now Over 40 Years Old.

On September 4, 1870, Leon Gambetta, speaking for himself and other radical members of the Legislative Assembly, announced the deposition of the Bonapartist dynasty and the establishment of the republic. This was two days after the battle of Sedan, in the Franco-German war, and the capture of MacMahon's army and Napoleon III. The campaign entered upon so confidently by that potentate thus collapsed and he was a prisoner in the hands of the Germans. On the evening of the 4th the government of national defense was established, with Gen. Trochu at the head. While this was being done the Empress Eugenie, disguised, fled secretly from Paris and entered Belgium, on her way to England, where she has resided ever since.

The governmental scheme which was created on September 4 has lasted 40 years and is stronger today than it ever was in the past. In duration, it has outlived any other system which France has had since the overthrow of Louis XVI. and the Bourbon in 1792. The first republic, which began in 1792, lasted, in its various shapes, until 1804, when it gave way to the first empire, under Bonaparte, and that was subverted in 1814, in the war waged against Bonaparte by combined Europe. It was succeeded by the restored Bourbon monarchy under Louis XVIII. in 1814, which went down in the revolution of July, in 1830, Charles X, then being at its head. The Orleans dynasty, which was created in 1830, was submerged in the storm of 1848, and the second republic was started, which gave place to the second empire in 1852, under Napoleon III., and this collapsed at Sedan, when the present regime came into being.

Thus the third republic has had a longer career than that of any two of its predecessors since 1792. For several years it was conceded to be only an experiment, which endured because a majority of the French people could not unite upon any other form of government. Along until the end of the Presidency in 1879 of Napoleon III.'s old warrior, MacMahon, there was doubt as to whether it would weather the storms which seemed to be gathering around it. Even as recently as 1889, in the Boulanger scare, the advent of the Man on Horseback was often very evidently predicted. But it passed through the tentative stage before the death of President Carnot in 1894, and is now a permanency. Just four days after Gambetta proclaimed the establishment of the republic the United States cabled its recognition of the new regime and welcomed it at the council board of the nations. Five months later it was recognized by the great powers of Europe in alliance with England and Russia, and its ententes with other countries gives France a larger influence in the affairs of the world than it exerted previously since the days of Bonaparte's power in the first republic a century ago.

The young private had been posted as sentry on C squadron stables. But, lo, when the sergeant of the guard came round on his visit he was no more to be seen. The sergeant was about to depart to make inquiries when there came a rustling noise from a heap of straw and the sentry stood before him minus his boots and looking very sleepy.

The Thieving Arabs.

"Their whole lives are given up to the breeding of their flocks and herds and to systematic robbery," writes Douglas Caruthers of his experiences in northwest Arabia. "The Bedouin lives in his tent for a week at a time or until the fit comes over him, and he calls his companions, and off they go on a foray to steal camels in order to increase their own herds. The Arab's great idea is to possess a rifle for that means power. In order to do this he must steal camels. So, having stolen camels, he purchases a rifle. Then come more raids to take more camels, this time in order to buy a wife. Camels are their sole means of exchange."

A Fair Proposition.

A popular comedian and playwright was praising the humorous value of suggestions. "It is funnier to suggest a thing," he said, "than to say it out. Playwrights should remember this. Suggestion—suggestion, suggestion—is what makes really funny the little boy's remark to his father, 'Pa, if you help me with my arithmetic lesson to-night I'll tell you where ma hid her trousers.'"

Altogether Wrong.

"Pa," said the blooming daughter of the household, "I wish you wouldn't call young Mr. Softleigh a popinjay." "And why not?" "Because he isn't a jay, and there doesn't seem to be any hope of his poppin'."

The population of Bucharest is about 200,000. The houses are mostly of one or two stories in the residential section and built separately with a great deal of open space. The city is very widespread and covers an area of about twenty-five square miles.

BUT A SHORT JUMP BACKWARD.

Do Indications Point to a Reversion to Primeval Conditions?

Society is going in for roasted peanuts, cabbage, fruits, and other ancient food staples, canapes, caviar and other rich, modern delicacies are being tabooed, it seems, as the "apendices" have become distrustful of them. Perhaps we are awaking, preparing to turn back. Women are breaking into the pursuits of men. In Paris there are many cabwomen and in some of our cities in the west policewomen. There are women lawyers, women barbers, bartenders, farmers, physicians and journalists. Women are smoking cigarettes, and the men some of them, are trying to break themselves of the habit.

On the other hand men are breaking into the pursuits of women. They are becoming cooks and bottlewashers. In London some of the men do the ironing, the washing, the darning and the cooking. Many men are marrying for money and living idle lives in the air men, trying to imitate the birds. Down below, in automobiles, they are trying to imitate the wind.

One wonders if we are going back to original conditions. From the working women and the idling men of to-day it is but a short jump backward to the Indians who loitered in the woods while the squaws did all the work. From the women who smoke cigarettes to-day it is but a short step backward to the women who used to smoke pipes. Perhaps it won't be long before we are again swinging airily among the trees, from limb to limb, knocking down cocoanuts.

WILL NOT HAVE THEM SPOILED.

Queen Mary a Spartan When It Comes to Keeping Children's Tastes Simple.

When it comes to imbuing her children with simple tastes, Queen Mary, of England, surely has all other royal mothers "doped." Her eldest young woman, who is a great favorite with the royal children, whom she knows through their French governess, received an evidence of the length to which the Queen goes in this respect. The young woman in question, when the little Prince John, a special pet of hers, was ill a short time ago, begged to be allowed to send him a Teddy bear, to replace a worn-out one he had been in the habit of taking to bed with him, after the fashion of many children, royal and otherwise.

The Queen consented that the prince should accept the gift and the friend straightway purchased the largest, fattest and most elaborate Teddy bear possible, which she despatched to the palace. Her surprise was great when the bear came back again to her with a little note from the Queen saying that she always liked the children to have only the most unpretentious toys, and that as Prince John's last Teddy bear was but a quarter of the size of the present one she considered it would be better to have the same kind. The astonished young woman hurriedly exchanged the large, robust and costly Teddy for a most modest specimen of the breed.

The same treatment is accorded Princess Mary. Her dolls have always been of a simple kind, and she is required to make their clothes herself, in the intervals of stitching flannel petticoats for the poor, with which task she occupies much of her time.

The Birth of Reform Schools.

The first reform school for juvenile delinquents was probably the one organized at Metray, near Tours, France, about the year 1859 by M. M. de Metz found in some wealthy noblemen the financial assistance he needed to materialize his idea, and the school was started with the most beneficent results. The idea was taken hold of by the French government, and, since that time, but of other continental countries, and the enthusiasm created by the work resulted in the grand conference of the reformatory union, at the real beginning of the present day work in behalf of juvenile delinquents.

The Hours of the Day.

The ancient Egyptians divided the day and night into twelve hours each, a custom adopted by the Jews and Greeks probably from the Babylonians. The day was divided into twelve hours in Rome by L. Papius Cursor, who about B.C. 293 erected a sun dial in the temple of Quirinus. Prior to the invention of water clocks (153 B.C.) the time was called at Rome by public criers. In Babel, in early times, the measurement of time was uncertain. One expedient was by wax candles, three inches burning an hour and six wax candles burning twenty-four hours, or a day.

His Last Breath.

The reflections upon the value of breath, written by a correspondent, recall an old riddle which asked what it was that no man wished to take and no man wished to give up. The answer was, His last breath. Charles Lamb had an epicurean desire concerning his own last breath, half of which at any rate comes home to many of us. Macready heard him express the hope that he might draw it in through a pipe and exhale it in a pun. Certainly that would be the most precious breath on record.—London Chronicle.

A Rain Trap.

In a time of distressing drought, says a writer in The Yorkshire Post, a harassed amateur agriculturist stepped into a shop to buy a barometer. The shopman was giving a few atrociously typed instructions about indications and pressures when the purchaser impatiently interrupted him. "Yes, yes," said he, "that's all right, but what I want to know is how you get it when you want it to rain?"

HEROES OF FAMOUS CHARGE.

Most of the Survivors of Light Brigade Dependent on Charity.

There are believed to be only thirty-two survivors of the rank and file who took part in the historic charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava, and of these twenty-two are in necessitous circumstances, says the London Daily Telegraph. The oldest is 88 years of age, and but for philanthropic effort he and his companions would have had their last days overshadowed by want. At a moment when the thoughts of the nation have been fixed once more upon the Crimean campaign by the death of Miss Florence Nightingale, the need for money to aid these old heroes will assuredly not be allowed to exist for a single day. It is thirteen years since Mr. T. H. Roberts established the Balaklava Light Brigade Survivors' Relief Fund. At the banquet then held seventy-four men attended, and it was discovered that several of them were spending their last days in workhouses—forgotten and neglected.

In the intervening years more than half these heroes have gone to their rest, and it is a duty which the nation owes to itself that none of the survivors shall be again permitted to need any of the simple comforts which can add a solace to their last days. The work of aiding these veterans, it need hardly be added, has lost a sympathizer and supporter in Miss Nightingale.

The money which goes to these neglected heroes is well spent. They are sent weekly pensions by post, and when at length the "Last Post" sounds each of the old men receives a decent funeral.

FACING STARVATION.

A Fish Famine Threatens the People of Kamchatka.

Complaints have reached St. Petersburg from Kamchatka that the population of that peninsula is threatened with famine this winter owing to the scarcity of fish, which is the staple diet of 14,000 Kamchatkans and their 14,000 sledges dogs. The report is a surprise, because Kamchatka has always been considered one of the richest countries in the world as regards fish. Since 1906, however, Japanese fishermen, by blocking the estuaries, have caught or destroyed millions of fish at spawning time, when they travel in immense shoals from the sea up the rivers. The native fishermen soon imitated this practice, with the result that the Kamchatkan streams are now practically denuded of fish, and the poor people are facing starvation.

CAUSE AND CURE OF RHEUMATISM

Due to Impurities in the Blood— Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The most noticeable and immediate result of rheumatism is a marked thinning of the blood, and in no disease does it develop more rapidly. Not only does the blood become weak but it is soon filled with impurities, which the different organs of the body have been unable to throw off. One of the most harmful of these impurities is uric acid, which is formed from the waste products of the body. In health it is readily passed off by the kidneys with the help of oxygen from the red corpuscles of the blood. Without oxygen the kidneys are unable to rid the system of this acid and it is retained in the blood and distributed to all parts of the body. The weak back, pains across the kidneys and thin scanty, highly colored secretions, which follow, show that the acid is already in the blood and often leads the sufferer to think he has kidney trouble. If the disease is not driven out of the blood, rheumatism can never be cured, and the sufferer will always be subject to attacks, whenever exposed to damp or cold. With each returning attack the pain becomes more severe and complications often arise, making necessary the use of habit-forming drugs to relieve pain.

It is readily seen that the only way to cure rheumatism is through the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills afford such treatment as they contain all the elements necessary to build up and purify the blood. They increase its oxygen carrying capacity enabling the kidneys to pass the uric acid from the body and the other organs to do their work. This rheumatism is reached at its root and permanently cured. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are absolutely free from all habit-forming drugs, and are not an experiment as the following case will show:—Mr. W. Studley Lewis, Pilot Mount, Man., says:—"I am a firm believer in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and always keep some by me in case of need. A few years ago while teaching school I suffered so much with rheumatism in my arms and shoulders that I had the greatest difficulty in writing on the blackboard, and after trying a number of remedies without benefit, I was almost in despair, and felt inclined to abandon teaching. But one day I happened to pick up one of Dr. Williams' almanacs, and read of the cure of a number of severe cases of rheumatism through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This decided me to give the Pills a trial, and I had only taken them a few weeks when I felt much better. In the course of a few weeks more the pains and stiffness had all left me, and I had no more difficulty in doing my work. I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for they and they alone cured me of my rheumatism."

THE PATIENT ANGLER.

Many and very similar to one another are the tales told of the patience of the fisherman. This incident of an angler in sunny France may be taken as a model of them all. He was sedulously engaged in his favorite pursuit when a tourist encountered him, and asked him how long he had been fishing in that stream.

"Twenty-three years, monsieur," he answered calmly.

"Do you get many bites?"

"Eleven years ago, monsieur," he replied, without lifting his eyes from his cork, "eleven years ago on this very spot I had an excellent bite."

HE KNEW HIS JURY.

The attorney for the defendant had made a masterly plea. When he concluded nearly everybody was weeping. The jury, made up of hard-headed, weather-beaten old countrymen on whose ears oratory and sentiment fell like snow flakes in a warm chimney, was unmoved. The other attorney took their measure at a glance.

"Gentlemen," he said, coolly, "let it be understood to begin with that I am not boring for water."

France's Latest Form of Government Now Over 40 Years Old.

On September 4, 1870, Leon Gambetta, speaking for himself and other radical members of the Legislative Assembly, announced the deposition of the Bonapartist dynasty and the establishment of the republic. This was two days after the battle of Sedan, in the Franco-German war, and the capture of MacMahon's army and Napoleon III. The campaign entered upon so confidently by that potentate thus collapsed and he was a prisoner in the hands of the Germans. On the evening of the 4th the government of national defence was established, with Gen. Trochu at the head. While this was being done the Empress Eugenie, disguised, fled secretly from Paris in 1870, and entered Belgium, on her way to England, where she has resided ever since.

The governmental scheme which was created on September 4 has lasted 40 years and is stronger to-day than it ever was in the past. In duration it has outlived the past system which France has had since the overthrow of Louis XVI. and the Bourbons in 1792. The first republic, which began in 1792, lasted, in its various shapes, until 1804, when Napoleon, in the war waged against Bonaparte by combined Europe. It was succeeded by the restored Bourbon monarchy under Louis XVIII. in 1814, which went down in the revolution of July, in 1830, Charles X. then being at its head. The Orleansist monarchy of the Citizen-King Louis Philippe, which was created in 1830, was submerged in the storm of 1848, and the second republic was started, which gave place to the second empire, under Napoleon III., and this collapsed at Sedan, when the present regime came into being.

Thus the third republic has had a longer career than that of any two of its predecessors since 1792. For several years it was conceded to be only an experiment, which, because a majority of the French people could not unite upon any other form of government. Along until the end of the Presidency in 1879 of Napoleon III.'s old warrior, MacMahon, there was doubt as to whether it would weather the storms which seemed to be gathering around it. Even as recently as 1889, in the Boulanger scare, the advent of the Man on Horseback was often very confidently predicted. But it passed through the tentative stage before the death of President Carnot in 1904, and is now a permanency. Just four days after Gambetta proclaimed the establishment of the republic the United States cabled its recognition of the new regime and welcomed it at the council board of the nations. Five months later it was recognized by the great powers of Europe. Its alliance with England and Russia and its ententes with other countries gives France a larger influence in the affairs of the world than it exerted previously since the days of Bonaparte's power in the first republic a century ago.

A MOTHER'S ADVICE TO OTHER MOTHERS

Mrs. Nicholas Breau, Rogersville, N. B., writes: "I can highly recommend Baby's Own Tablets to all mothers whose little ones are constipated. I gave my little girl the Tablets and they regulated her bowels and now she sleeps well, eats well, is fat and good all the time. I am really delighted with the Tablets and I always keep them in the house and as soon as my little girl becomes troubled or feverish I give her the Tablets and she is soon well again. Please send me another box for they are the very best medicine I know of for little ones." The Tablets are sold under a guarantee to contain nothing injurious to even the youngest child. Sold at 25 cents a box by all medicine dealers or from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Identified.

William M. Chase, the artist, was a picturesque figure, dressing in clothes that had a certain originality, though they conformed more or less to the prevailing fashions. On one occasion Chase on his way home stepped into a little wine shop and ordered a jug of claret of a special brand sent to his house. The lad who brought it came to the front door an hour afterward, when the artist had already arrived. "Some wine," he said curtly. The maid, knowing there was yet plenty in the cellar and believing the lad had made a mistake, said she was sure it was not for that house and did the boy remember the name of the man who ordered it. The boy didn't. "Then," said the servant, "you've come to the wrong place; we never ordered wine!" At this moment the boy spied Chase's famous hat on the hall table. "Say," he asked, "does that hat live here?" "Yes," said the amused maid. "Then," said the boy triumphantly, "here's where the wine belongs!"—Argonaut.

Not For Fashion's Sake.

The criminal law of England was formerly marked by indiscriminating severity. Theft of an article valued above 10 shillings was punished with death. In writing about "Sweet Hampstead and Its Associations" Mrs. White records a pleasant thing of Lord Mansfield, who, as a rule, leaned to the side of mercy. It was Lord Mansfield who directed a jury to find a stolen trinket less in value than 10 shillings in order that the thief might escape capital punishment. To this the jeweler who prosecuted demurred, asserting that the fashion of the thing had cost him twice that money.

"Gentlemen," replied the judge, with grave solemnity, "we ourselves stand in need of mercy. Let us not hang a man for the fashion's sake!"

VENETIAN WOMEN.

The Whims of Fashion Hold No Terrors For Them.

The women of Venice are absolutely free from the rule which Dame Fashion exercises over their sisters elsewhere. They care nothing for modes. With them the length of the skirt remains always the same, neither short nor long, and they always wear plainly made dark dresses, black stockings and the heelless slippers of the east. Hats are unknown.

The universal outdoor wrap for all ages and all sizes is the black shawl, with a deep silken fringe. It is folded with a short point above and a long one below, and sometimes it envelops the figure from head to foot. It is never fastened at the throat, and when it slips off it is gathered up with one outstretched arm, which makes the spectator think of a big bird stretching its wing.

In their attire the women of Venice are independent, only wearing local clothing, but with feminine inconsistency they are thoroughly up to date in the matter of hairdressing, the style of their coiffures changing from time to time, according to the vogue of the moment in London and Paris.

CURED OF LAME BACK WHEN 64.

Mr. Samuel Martin, of Stratthroy, Ont., passed twenty years of his life in misery, suffering tortures from lame back. He tried nearly all advertised remedies and household recipes, but received no benefit from any of them.

Some months ago, seeing Gin Pills advertised, Mr. Martin purchased a box. The relief which Mr. Martin experienced after he had taken one box was so great that he knew he had found the right remedy at last. He used two more boxes and is now completely cured.

SCENE OF AMAZING ACTIVITY.

During the last year or two the Chinese have taken up wireless telegraphy with especial eagerness, making a writer who returned from that country not long ago after the third visit of six months' duration to the Chinese empire in the last ten years. Two hundred men are studying it in a school established by the Government especially for the purpose. There are many wireless stations at Tibet. And even the small Chinese river gunboats are equipped with wireless. The whole empire to-day, in short, is a scene of amazing military and educational activity. Wherever I went on the trains I saw military camps, in which part of the 5,000,000 army which China is mobilizing, is being trained. Schools are being opened literally by thousands. There are railroad schools, telegraph schools, postoffice schools, custom house schools, normal schools, laboratories, museums and libraries. The teachers in these schools are partly foreign, but chiefly native. All these schools have recently been established by the Imperial Government itself to further the national desire for being up to date. The Chinese admire the English-speaking races, and turn their thumbs up as a sign of gratification whenever they see one of our fellow-countrymen.

In spite of the fact that the Imperial Government is giving the Chinese every possible concession in the way of education, there is considerable dissatisfaction at being governed under a foreigner, China's last three monarchs have been babies when they first came to the throne. The Chinese feel that they are passing through a critical period of their history, and that they need especially now a full-grown man to govern them. For this reason, what might be called China's "anti-baby" feeling is very strong.

HE FEARED BLOOD POISON.

But Zam-Buk Saved his Thumb!

Once again a case is reported in which the popular balm Zam-Buk has saved a worker from the terrible effects of blood-poisoning. Mr. Alfred Hy. Orth, of Shipley, Ont., says: "While at work I had the misfortune to run a rusty nail under my thumb nail, to the depth of about one and a half inches. The pain was terrible and what I feared was that the nail, being so dirty and rusty, would set up festering and blood-poison. I knew from previous experience how good Zam-Buk was, so I cleaned the thumb, melted a little Zam-Buk, and ran it into the wound. The result was wonderful! It soothed the pain and the thumb actually did not swell. Zam-Buk kept away all inflammation. I was able to go on with my work all the time, and in a few days the thumb was as good as ever. A balm which can do this should be in every working man's home."

Being composed of pure vegetable essences, Zam-Buk is an ideal balm for babies and young children.

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for ulcers, abscesses, eczema, ringworm, blood-poison, scalp sores, chapped hands, cold sores, intamed patches, bad leg, varicose veins and ulcers, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin diseases and injuries. Temporary Heat Quickly

Did you ever stop to think of the many ways in which a perfect oil heater is of value? If you want to sleep with your window open in winter, you can get sufficient heat from an oil heater while you undress at night, and then turn it off. Apply a match in the morning, when you get out of bed, and you have heat while you dress. Those who have to eat an early breakfast before the stove is radiating heat can get immediate warmth from an oil heater, and then turn it off.

The girl who practices on the piano in a cold room in the morning can have warmth from an oil heater while she plays, and then turn it off.

"Biliter says he is waked up every morning at 4." "What does he keep—a rooster, a baby or a grandpa?"

A SIGN OF LIFE.

A well-known professor, who had the reputation of erring somewhat on the side of pedantry in regard to the use of the right word in the right place, returned home one evening and surprised a burglar at work in his room.

Whipping out a revolver the latter covered him, saying:—"If you move you're a dead man."

"Allow me to remark, my good man," rejoined the professor, "that your statement is absurd. If I move it is excellent proof that I am alive. You really should consider your words a little before using them."

RAW FURS ARE WORTH

A friend dropped in on an old lady who was trying a bit of bacon. "Grand bacon, that," said the friend, sniffing affably. "Grand bacon?" Well, I guess it is grand bacon," said the old lady, turning to the slices in the pan. "And it's none o' yer murdered stout, neither. That pig died a natural death."
